

Western Auto Associate Store Reopened Here

J. W. Steele, formerly of Greensboro and now a resident of this city, has purchased the Western Auto Associate Store located in the Hotel Wilkes building on Main street and has reopened the store for business.

Mr. Steele has added much merchandise to the already large stock of auto supplies and accessories and the store is in position to supply the needs of motorists with automobile accessories, tires, tubes, bicycles, radios, tools and many other items.

As the store is being opened the famous coupon sale is in full blast and unusually low prices are quoted throughout the store.

For further details relative to the store re-opening and some of the unusual bargains offered, the readers' attention is called to the firm's advertisement elsewhere in this newspaper.

Bar in Memorial Service Today

Meeting Is Held in Wilkes Court This Afternoon and Resolutions Adopted

Wilkes bar association held a memorial service this afternoon in Wilkes court immediately following opening of court at 1:30.

The service was in honor of J. Mack Brown, popular member of the bar who died on April 13.

Resolutions prepared by Kyle Hayes, Eugene Trivette and J. H. Whicker were adopted by the bar as follows:

It has been an honored custom for the Wilkes County Bar to pause and observe a memorial service so that the members of this bar could give expression to their opinions and sentiments when once again the Angel of death has called to his last reward a loyal member of our Bar Association, John McKinley Brown, who was in the prime of his life.

Our last gathering here was to do honor to the Dean of the Bar, the Honorable Frank D. Hackett, and today we stand awed and shocked over the passing of one of the younger members of our bar, whose bright future stood out before him. But such is life, and in the uncertainty of same we stand with awe and wonder at the sudden stoppage of the engine of life. We are informed that just before his going that he had a long conversation with his mother, Mrs. M. F. Brown, and in said conversation contemplated the immortality of his soul.

Mac Brown, as he was known by his intimate friends, was a lawyer of outstanding ability and, like most strong men, he had his prejudices, but of this he was himself conscious and strove to conquer from them and to be always just. He was a firm believer in the truth. He was eminently courteous and affable to the members of the bar who were younger than he. He was considerate and tender and his influence with them and their fondness for him was such that they felt his death as that of a dear relative and friend. To the members of the Bar who were older than he, he commanded the greatest respect and we, too, feel a great blank in our Association.

Those of us who appeared on the other side found him to be diligent and a marvel of industry. He was possessed with wit and humor, and one of the best illustrations we have to offer is on one occasion: When the present Chief Justice of the Supreme Court asked him if the opinion he had just cited had not been criticized by the bar, Mac, like a flash of lightning, stuttered and replied, "Be dogged if I know, but it is still the law until reversed."

He took an active part in all civic proposals looking to the betterment of his county and state. He was active in the counsel of the Republican Party which he loved and adored and was its efficient chairman for six years.

He believed in the justness of the living God, but there was nothing pretentious in his religion.

Possessing these characteristics it is not surprising, and guided by a logical mind and wonderful common sense, he became one of the most successful young advocates of his day at the bar.

Therefore, be it resolved by the members of the Wilkes County Bar Association here assembled:

First, That in the death of John McKinley Brown our profession has lost one of its brightest and most ethical members, and the State of North Carolina one of her truest and best citizens.

Second, That these proceedings be presented to the Superior Court of this county with a request that they be spread upon its minutes as a permanent record, and a copy be sent to his family and a copy to the local newspaper.

EUGENE TRIVETTE,
KYLE HAYES,
J. H. WHICKER,
Committee.
