ROARING RIVER, Route 2, no 25.—Services were held Sunday, June 21, at Briar Creek, at the Roaring River Baptist church, Rev. R. E. Crater in pastor at Briar Creek and Rev. J. M. Wright at Roaring River.

Mrs. B. L. Johnson had as her guests June 18 Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Davis, Mrs. Cornelia Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson and children. Mr. Robert Edmiston moved his sawmill just above the spring at the old Tilley place, but his feet were swollen so he could not see last Thursday afternoon and Friday. He had athlete's foot.

Mr. Tharpe, of Roaring River, came over last Friday afternoon to see Mrs. Laura Linney about her young cow, little Pansy, he had been keeping. He had previously thought something of buying Pansy.

Mrs. Nell Walker, of Elkin, has been spending her vacation this week with her sister, Mrs. Lois Roberts, and father, Rev. N. Jarvis.

Mrs. Laura Linney felt quite OK the past few days.

Several WPA workers in this section have been dropped from the rolls.

The colored people enjoyed an ice cream supper at Estelle Dobbs Coloway's Saturday night.

Miss Minnie Love said her mother, Mrs. Alice Love, was not as well as she had been much of the time since her stroke.

Milk seemed so scarce that Mrs. Laura Linney's youngest helper, "Beauty," has gone to giving milk without finding a calf or any prospect of freshening.

WILLKIE AND McNARY HEAD G. O. P. TICKET

Ohio's 52 votes from Taft to Willkie but Chairman Martin said he could not recognize the Ohio governor for the purpose until the roll call had been completed.

After a great roar from the floor and the gallery following Pennsylvania's announcement and Al Bricker's appearance on the platform, the crowd grew silent as the roll call was resumed.

When order was restored and the sixth ballot resumed, a member of the Washington delegation moved a poll of its 16 individual votes and slowed the official result. Willkie had predicted his own nomination on the sixth ballot.

Earlier Report
As Willkie's strength grew by bounds upon each succeeding ballot the galleries, very much for the utilities man from the start, went wild.

Reports spread that Dewey was on his way to the hall to address the delegates.

The sixth ballot was ordered, and immediately an unidentified delegate was on his feet clamoring for an overnight recess. The pro-Willkie galleries, sensing the trend toward their man, were vehement in expressing their objections. Chairman Joseph W. Martin ruled the motion out of order because he had already ordered the roll called for the sixth time.

The call of the roll for the fourth ballot saw Willkie and Taft forge past Dewey, who had led on all previous ballots.

The official count gave: Willkie 306; Taft 254; Dewey 250. The voting had seen: Willkie start with 105 votes on the first ballot, register a gain of 66 on the second, 88 on the third and 47 on the fourth. Some were arguing that Dewey's stride was shortening, and a number of political wiseacres foresaw a situation arising in which Willkie and Taft would be deadlocked with neither able to obtain the 501 votes necessary to nominate.

Powerful Factors Oppose Willkie
Moreover, powerful factors in the party are opposed to Willkie, and many were on the alert for signs of any alliance of forces aimed at keeping his total short of the 501 that he seeks.

The first real break of the convention came from the Illinois delegation. A chunk of it slipped away from Dewey and gave Taft a net gain in the state of 23 votes and Willkie 3. The result brought a real outburst and a prolonged cheer from the Ohio senator's partisans on the floor and in the galleries.

On the third ballot Willkie had made a gain of 78 votes as compared with the second tally, and of 154 as compared with the first. Taft meanwhile stepped up from 203 to 212. Both their gains were at Dewey's expense. Between the second and third ballots his total fell off from 338 to 315.

Thus the balloting was running much as many convention-going veterans had forecast it—Dewey leading at first with both Taft and Willkie gaining upon him as the voting progressed.

Slowly the roll of the states was called in all the tense and jittery atmosphere of a close political contest, with tremendous stakes resting upon the outcome. Galleries jam-packed with spectators made it very apparent that Willkie was their favorite. There were cheers aplenty for both Taft and Dewey, but they could not match the fervor and unmistakable spontaneity with which the crowd burst into a great roar at every Willkie gain.

Convention Hall, Philadelphia.—With not so much as a delegate badge to his lapel—but with the Republican presidential nomination tucked securely in his pocket—Wendell L. Willkie visited the party's national convention in its closing hours Friday and took it by storm again.

The convention's smiling victor stood before the crowded hall, which had just seen Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon nominated for the vice presidency, and in a speech carrying the heavy emphasis on brevity, pledged himself to the Republican cause.

Thursday night he stamped the great gathering—in a pandemonium of pro-Willkie uproar from the galleries—into nominating him as its presidential candidate. Yesterday, his tousled hair covered with confetti, and even a bit sticking to his perspiring cheek, he faced the microphone and said simply:

"Democracy and our way of life is facing the most crucial test it has ever faced in all its long history. . . .
"As your nominee I expect to conduct a crusading, aggressive, fighting campaign to bring unity to America, to bring the unity of labor and capital, agriculture and manufacturer, farmer and worker, and all classes to this great cause of the preservation of freedom. . . .
"So, you Republicans, I call upon you to join me, help me. The cause is great. We must win. We cannot fail if we stand together in one united fight. . . .
Crowds Go Wild

The crowds which had cheered an absent hero for four days went wild at the opportunity to applaud their man standing before them. Every sentence of his speech drew its well-bugging shout, and as Thursday night he captured their votes, Friday he appeared to capture their loyalty and fighting devotion. . .

will be a factor in the election.

Local people make up the entire cast from the days of the Cherokee Indians to 1940. Such characters of history as Colonel Ben Cleveland, Daniel Boone, and the early Moravian settlers are included with costumes of their age and in the midst of appropriate scenery.

The pageant will begin at eight o'clock tonight, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights and seating arrangements have been made to accommodate record crowds at the fairgrounds.

Blue Ridge Post V.F.W. Meeting

Blue Ridge Post No. 1142, Veterans of Foreign Wars, held their regular semi-monthly meeting, Tuesday night, June 25, in their new quarters in the municipal building in Wilkesboro. This was the first meeting at this place and some of the members had trouble in finding the place, but a large number of members was present, and after routine business was attended, a class of nine new members was obligated into the post.

Several more applications have been filed with the Adjutant, and part of the fees paid. To become full members it will be necessary for men to attend the meeting and take the obligations. The degree team will be ready to give the full ritual induction very soon, and then members will be received with the full ceremony.

Men from all walks of life and from every community in this section are coming into the organization of service men. "We are not trying to weaken any other service man's organization, but we are trying to build up another post here that will add to the strength and influence of the men that have worn the uniform of their country in the hour of need in the past. Every man that has served in war time should at least belong to some one or more of the several organizations of service men. There are men here in this county who are eligible to belong to all three of the best known organizations, and who do not belong to any one. We are doing our utmost to contact every service man in Wilkes county, and insist that they join some post, either of the V. F. W. or the American Legion, or perhaps in some instance the D. A. V's. In union there is strength, and after all, every one who has been a soldier has something in common that is not shared by the world," officials of the post said.

Milk Business Here Increasing

The North Wilkesboro Milk Receiving Station operated by Coble Dairy Products of Lexington, N. C., continues to increase its business. About $6,000 is distributed monthly to the farmers of this section. Since this is only about one-sixth of the total farm payroll of Coble Dairy Products, Mr. George Coble has sent three special workers to this section to help increase the volume of milk at the North Wilkesboro milk station. These men are Mr. W. A. Smith and Mr. R. G. Woodall of the Coble organization augmented by Professor B. E. Goodale of the Dairy Department Staff of Clemson Agricultural College, Clemson, S. C. Professor Goodale has been in charge of all dairy manufacturers work at Clemson for eighteen years. Each milk truck driver delivering to the North Wilkesboro Coble milk receiving station will have one of the above dairy field men accompany him over his entire route, aiding in the promotion of greater volume milk production. This promotion work will be followed by educational work to aid the farmers in getting more economical production.

When interviewed by the Journal-Patriot, Professor Goodale stated that he believed Wilkes county had good possibilities for milk production if the farmers could be assured of a profitable all-year market for their product, and if they were taught proper feeding practices plus the care and handling of milk. He urged that North Wilkesboro business men encourage livestock raising and back it to the limit.

Professor Goodale is a graduate of Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa, and has a Master's Degree in dairying from the same institution. He will be with Coble Dairy Products of Lexington until the college session begins at Clemson on September 11. He offers his services to the dairy farmers of this section without charge or obligation of any kind. Professor Goodale will continue working in the farming territory surrounding North Wilkesboro until farmers interested in milk production are satisfied with their market.

Moravian Falls Home Club Meets

The Moravian Falls Home Demonstration Club met at the community house Wednesday afternoon, June 19th. The devotional was opened by Mrs. W. R. Hix reading the scripture selection. Mrs. S. C. Stewart gave a very interesting discourse on the picture study, "The Spinner."

Mrs. C. F. Bretholt, the president, opened the business session. Mrs. W. C. Scroggs called the roll to which sixteen members answered.

For the demonstration feature, Miss Harriet McGoogan discussed pictures and hangings for walls. She displayed pictures and outlined the appropriate frames to be used. Perhaps the most unique idea she suggested was the use of china plates painted with floral and fruit designs. Miss McGoogan explained where these plates could be purchased in both china and wood.

Mesdames R. A. Greer and W. C. Scroggs, assisted by Miss Lucille Scroggs, served delicious refreshments which consisted of iced tea, sandwiches and cake.

After the meeting had closed Miss McGoogan took pictures of the group in front of the community house.

The members all expressed deep regret over the fact that Miss McGoogan is leaving. The fine work she has done in the community has been constructive and uplifting. She has shown a splendid spirit of co-operation and unselfishness and the spark of enthusiasm she has kindled in the members of the club will be an incentive to carry the work forward harmoniously with the succeeding home demonstration agent. Miss McGoogan's accomplishments are deeply appreciated.

Prior to the program J. B. Carter, who represented the club at the International convention at Minneapolis, spoke briefly and stated he would report more fully on the convention later.

Program chairman Dr. E. N. Phillips, introduced Tom Hunter, who made a splendid talk on "Personality." He illustrated his message with Radio tubes, describing the mechanism of the tube as follows: The plate, the filament, and the grid. He described the work and function of each of these parts in transferring sound from one place to another. He said that the human personality is like the radio, it is three in one, the body, the mind and the conscience or spirit. The conscience may be thought of as the grid. It is here that the antenna of the radio is attached and it is to the conscience that nature helps to help other people find its source. It is here civic clubs, charities, institutions, and all efforts to do good unto others takes their start.
