Mrs. S. T. Taylor Gave Party For Her Sisters

To honor her two sisters, Mrs. Larry Madalia and Miss Doris Nachamson, both of Durham, Mrs. S. T. Taylor gave a pretty party at her home on H Street Wednesday evening. Gladioli and other summer flowers made a colorful setting for the guests at 3 tables of bridge and one of rook. A dessert course preceded play.

In bridge Mrs. James McCartney won the top score prize and in rook Miss Frances Green was the winner. Miss Green also held the traveler's prize.

Honor gift for Miss Nachamson was a cosmetic set and for Mrs. Madalia crystal.

Miss Mary Jo Pearson Entertains Friday Night

A trio of visitors and a bride were extended a pleasant courtesy Friday evening when Miss Mary Jo Pearson entertained at a desert bridge at her home on Sixth street. The prize for scoring highest in the game, which was played at four tables, went to Mrs. William Prevette.

Honor gifts were presented to the visitors, who were Miss Elizabeth Tuten, of Statesville, guest of Miss Pearson; Miss Elizabeth Carter, of Wadesboro, guest of her sister, Mrs. William Prevette; Miss Frances Howell, of Greensboro, guest of Mrs. Shoun Kerbaugh; and, also Mrs. Hayden Hayes, the former Miss Carrie Virginia Butler, of Tabor City.

Mrs. Forester Entertains For Mrs. Cranor

Mrs. F. C. Forester was hostess at a delightful dinner party at her home on D Street Thursday evening, honoring Mrs. W. T. Cranor, of Detroit, Michigan, who is on a visit here with relatives and friends.

A three course dinner was served at seven o'clock, after which rook and bridge were played at three tables. Mrs. Cranor was remembered with a gift.

Farewell Dance For Miss Faw

Miss Evelyn Faw, of North Wilkesboro, who leaves Saturday to return to her home after spending the winter here studying at King's Business college, was honored last night when her roommate, Miss Mildred Kendall, entertained at an informal dance at Kenwood lodge. About 50 or 60 young people were there for dancing from 9:30 until 1 o'clock.

At the door the hostess, honored and their escorts greeted guests. Miss Faw was with John Hawkins and Miss Kendall was with Clarence Mills.

Covering the ceiling almost completely were great clusters of bright colored balloons, and about the room stood bouquets of mixed summer flowers. Mrs. John Kendall assisted the hostesses in serving punch.

Mrs. Harry Pearson Entertains At Bridge

An enjoyable party of the week was the one given by Mrs. Harry Pearson at her home on Kensington Drive Wednesday afternoon when she entertained at a desert-bridge. A color note of yellow and white was emphasized throughout in the decorations, place cards, and refreshments.

Four tables were arranged for play in which the high score prize was won by Mrs. Jay Jones. Second high went to Mrs. Larry Madalia, of Durham, who was a houseguest of her sister, Mrs. S. Taylor.

Out of town guests were Mrs. Madalia and Miss Doris Nachamson, of Durham, another sister of Mrs. Taylor, and Miss Elizabeth Carter, of Wadesboro, who was here visiting her sister, Mrs. William Prevette.

AN AMERICAN PLATFORM

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

We the people of the United States now, in the face of desperate times, swear and pledge each other with our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor, with the intelligence of our brains, the work of our hands and the strength and affection of our hearts, never to tolerate a foreign judge on this continent, and to hold each other and support each other, come what may, that the American dream of freedom, of equality and of happiness may be realized by us and through us for mankind.

We hold these truths to be self-evident; that man is a child of God and of nature; that, as every schoolchild sings in the national hymn, God is our King, and we are protected by His might, and all our rights derive from Him, and we are endowed with them by our Maker.

We pledge allegiance to the truths that have been revealed to us in our most intimate personal experience; that we are all members one of another; that whatsoever we sow we shall reap; that men do not gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles; that the word is only a word until it is made flesh, and that neither in this mountain nor in Jerusalem shall men worship the Father, but that they worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth.

We believe these words and others prayed by men for thousands of years, to be no mystic revelation of a world after death, but scientifically precise truths about the relations of men on earth. And we pledge and swear to each other that we shall make His kingdom come on earth, as it is in heaven.

We swear that we shall take the Christian idea, upon which this nation was founded, out of the churches where it is enshrined and from under the bushel where it has stifled, and set it up on a candlestick on our common table, where it will give light to all the earth.

We pray that we shall be forgiven our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us. We stretch our hand, therefore, to each who will join us, regardless of what he has hitherto believed up to this moment. Conscious of our own innumerable errors we hold against no man his previous actions within the law; we welcome to our fellowship, to our comradeship, to our great endeavor, those who have been conservatives, or liberals or radicals, those who have been communists and those who have been Nazis; we welcome all the races of this nation of races. We welcome the rich who care more for this cause than for their riches, and we welcome the poor for whom the democratic ideal shall be made a fleshly reality of work and bread and freedom and brotherhood. For we, too, are prepared to cast off the old man, and be renewed.

We know only one enemy; those who preach hatred amongst brothers, those who incite creed against creed, race against race, shifting class against shifting class, nation against nation. We shall free speech into an instrument of discussion amongst free, reasonable and affectionate men and women. We shall cleanse it of its abasement into an instrument of internecine war.

We shall free assembly into an open forum, where all may present their views according only to the rules of human courtesy and the right of differences to be heard from every floor.

We shall free the press into an instrument for the dissemination of honest information and open, responsible criticism, instead of an instrument of sensationalism, gossip, agitation and anonymous propaganda.

We shall free individual citizens from the impertinent prying of the press and establish for them the right of privacy in their homes and their personal relations.

We shall free the collective conscience into the impelling power of a new society.

We shall make real the prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread." To that end we demand that the resources of this nation, of this soil upon which we all live, whether in public or in private hands, shall be recognized as communal wealth and be fully mobilized to the end that every child shall be fed, clothed and educated according to his abilities and according to the communal need; that every man and woman shall have the necessities of life, consisting of decent food, clothing and shelter, provided they are willing to work; that they shall be free in their choice of work, but encouraged and assisted in retraining, if their choice lies in an overcrowded field.

In the attainment of this goal we shall be free to invent and to work and no personal profit, believing that it is the spirit which quickeneth. We shall move with an eye toward objective reality, using to the fullest possible extent the existing organizations, but co-ordinating all of them into the service of the common aim. But we shall move with disregard of all vested interests, financial, economic or political. We shall recognize the differences of ability in men, the inequalities ordained in nature, but we shall seek to lift the less gifted to an ever higher level and to ennoble the more gifted by the crown of service, and we shall recognize that in one thing all are equal, that all must eat and be abetted and clothed, and live in a society they can trust.

For the ambition of monetary success we shall substitute the ambition of fame; the desire to be thought well of by mankind, and to hand on to one's children the heritage of a luminous name.

We are the children of Europe, and Africa, and Asia. We are the new world.

We swear and pledge each other that we shall build on this continent the new world. We swear that on this soil we shall make living reality and use of the religion that came to us from Asia, of the slumbering, innocent vitality, which came to us from Africa, of the manifold talents and gifts that have come to us from all the races and nations of Europe.

We swear that we shall be the hospitable synthesis of that deathless attachment to freedom which is the glory of the British; of that humane dignity which is the ornament of the French; of that mystic imagination which is the gift of the Slavs, of that robust and truculent poetry which is the characteristic of the Irish; of that superb sense of work and order which is the talent of the Germans; of that furious love of justice which is the mission of the Jews.

We shall say to the English among us: temper your pride; to the French: widen your sympathies; to the Germans: relax your stubbornness; to the Slavs: realize your dreams; to the Irish: forget past wrongs; to the Jews: abandon your fears, which are so easily transformed into arrogance; to the Negroes: give us your innocent faith in life and God.

We swear that the time shall never come when Americans will flee in fear from fellow Americans; when terror will be a horror worse than war; when revenge will be visited by neighbor upon neighbor for differences of past or present opinion.

We shall hold fast to the concept of law. We shall tolerate no retroactive "justice," which is only persecution.

We pledge allegiance to our God and to the flag which flies in His cause, with its firmament of expanding stars, its stripes of brave red blood and clean white purity of motive.

We swear that wherever men suffer from any cruel humiliation on this globe that flag shall be for them the symbol of faith, hope and charity. We swear that never shall it be a symbol of terror and oppression.

We swear that we shall defend this new world in the making—with the universal service of work for our youth; with the universal service of defense against all who would destroy us before we are reborn, and in the certain conviction that when this nation stands united in such a faith and working in such a reality it will draw all nations of men on to it.

Who are we? We are the coming American revolution, born last in a revolutionary world. The light which we shall shed is flickering isolatedly in millions of hearts. We are groping our way toward each other, and we shall find each other, very quickly. Who will be our President? No one whom we select, but he who selects us.

"I dreamed in a dream," said Walt Whitman, "that I saw a city invincible to the attacks of the whole of the rest of the earth. I dreamed that was the new city of Friends."

—Written on the opening day of the Republican convention, not by myself, but out of the cries of unknown Americans who pour out their longing and faith in letters and ask me to articulate their hopes for them. And written out of words spoken to me in Europe by men who look to America as the last hope. Written in the year of Our Lord 1940.

'Untamed' Is Tense Picture From Novel By Sinclair Lewis

Ray Milland and Patricia Morison team for the first time in "Untamed," Paramount's mighty Technicolor drama of the North Woods, which makes its local bow on Thursday-Friday at the Liberty Theatre. Akim Tamiroff is also in the cast.

Employing for its background the impressive grandeur of the mountains and forests of the North-Canadian Rockies, and co-starring three of Hollywood's most popular personalities—Ray Milland, Patricia Morison and Akim Tamiroff—Paramount has contrived an exciting and completely entertaining triangle drama in its motion picture version of Sinclair Lewis' intriguing story, "Mantrap," which has been brought to the screen under the title, "Untamed," at the Liberty Theatre, Thursday and Friday.

Eye-Filling Scenes

Enhanced by some of the most eye-filling Technicolor it has been this reviewer's good fortune to see reproduced on the screen—with especial applause for a blizzard said to be the first ever to be photographed in color—"Untamed" is the type of entertainment calculated to please every type of audience, and has been expertly as well as sympathetically directed by George Archibald, from a screenplay by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan and Frank Butler.

Briefly—the story tells of the nervous breakdown of a young society doctor—Ray Milland—who is ordered into the North woods to recuperate. Engaging Akim Tamiroff as his guide, Milland is hurt during a bear hunt, and is left in the care of Tamiroff's beautiful, city-bred wife, Patricia Morison, while the extended hunt is continued. Chafing dislike of the women of the tiny against the sly glances and open community, and yearning to return to the social life she had previously enjoyed, Patricia is strongly attracted to the young city doctor, and both are dismayed when they realize that their love is mutual.

Blizzard Thrilling Climax

Just as Milland is preparing to return to his city practice, an epidemic of streptococcus breaks out in the now, snowed-in village. Milland starts off alone to the nearest town, fifteen miles away, through a raging blizzard, to get a necessary serum to combat the disease. Patricia, fearing for his life, follows. Returning from the hunt, Tamiroff is convinced by gossiping neighbors that the two have run away together, and starts after them, with murder in his heart. He finds them unconscious and slowly freezing to death in a deserted cabin, and, from this point the picture builds to a tensely dramatic climax.

Combining great-scale adventure with an intimate story of a woman rebelling against the code of an isolated community, the film offers cumulative thrills that make it a must-see attraction. Not only the top roles are interpreted expertly, but right down to the last character, the acting is superlative.

Outstandingly fine performances have been given, not only by Milland, Miss Morison and Tamiroff, but also by Jane Darwell and William Frawley in featured roles, and the entire supporting cast.

Revival At Adley Now In Progress

Everybody is invited to attend the revival which is in progress under a brush arbor at Adley. The arbor is near where the Adley public school house used to stand. The services are conducted by Rev. Woodrow Smith, pastor of the Pentecostal Holiness church at Coage and of Zion Hill.

Home Enterprise Ranges Have Good Service Reputation

Home Enterprise ranges, which have been sold in North Wilkesboro for 25 years, always bring cooking satisfaction to the purchaser, says Mr. A. T. Whittington, manager of Markdown Furniture Co., of this city.

Each year witnesses the sale of more and more Home Enterprise ranges, due to many contributing facts, such as high quality, proper construction for baking and broiling perfection, beauty of design, and last but not least, the prices at which they are sold.

Mr. Whittington urges anyone interested in a range to see the Home Enterprise and get all the facts which have made them so popular among housewives of this section. A liberal trade-in allowance is made on old stoves. Read the firm's ad in this issue of The Journal-Patriot, then go see the ranges.
