

Mattress Project For Low Income Families To Begin In Wilkes Soon

County and township committees of the triple A in Wilkes county yesterday discussed the proposed mattress project under the direction of the extension service of State College and voted to organize and put the project into effect as soon as possible.

The meeting was called by County Agent J. B. Snipes and held at the courthouse. Other organizations present at the meeting and taking part in the discussion were the county commissioners, representatives of the Farm Security Administration, O. P. McCrary and Miss Anamerle Arant, northwestern district agents, Miss Elizabeth Williams, home demonstration agent, explained the process of mattress making and assisted in answering questions as presented.

They explained that the mattress project is two-fold in its scope—first, to use up some of the surplus cotton, and second, to enable low income farm families to make mattresses for home use. The project also has an educational value in that it teaches families how to make their own mattresses.

Application blanks for mattresses are already in the hands of the township committees throughout the county. Farmers wishing to make applications should contact their local triple A committeemen or secure blanks from the office of the county agent before September 1.

The mattress project, it was explained in various counties throughout the state and in a majority of states in the country. Any further information relative to the project will be given by the county agent, home agent or the triple A office in Wilkesboro.
