Farm-Home Agents To Attend Meetings

Through a series of program planning meetings, a schedule of expanded service to the farm people of North Carolina will be mapped out for county and home agents of the State College Extension Service. Dr. I. O. Schaub, Extension director, has announced.

The first of these two-day district meetings will begin October 16 and the last will be held October 31 and November 1. There are five extension districts in the State. Three of the conferences will be held in Raleigh, one in Statesville, and the last in Asheville.

Dr. Schaub explained that the meetings will be held to coordinate county farm and home educational programs with the work at State College. Subject matter specialists of the Extension Service will consult with each of the agents and make arrangements for visits to the counties to give method demonstrations. The type and number of result demonstrations to be placed with farmer and farm women also will be discussed with each agent.

The schedule of meetings is as follows: Northeastern district, October 16 and 17 at Raleigh; Southeastern district, October 18 and 19 at Raleigh; Northwestern district, October 21 and 22 at Raleigh; Southwestern district, October 29 and 30 at Statesville; and Western district, October 31 and November 1 at Asheville.

The conferences will be in charge of district farm agents and district home demonstration agents.

Farm and home agents will consult with county boards of agriculture, county AAA committees, and home demonstration county councils about plans for their counties before attending the conferences.

"Through these meetings we hope to continue the progress we have made during the past year in a better-balanced, more economical North Carolina agriculture," Dr. Schaub said.

Questions Answered By State College

Question: How should apples be graded?

Answer: The first step comes at harvest time. It has been estimated that one-sixth of the apples discarded as culls were disposed of because of rough handling at picking time, or rough treatment on their way to and in the grading and packing shed. A thorough knowledge of U. S. Standard grades is also necessary in classifying apples. Then, too, the fruit must be free from spray residue, dirt, or any defects that will seriously detract from the appearance or keeping quality of the fruit.
