COLLATERAL
From the borrower's viewpoint

When you "put up collateral" for a bank loan, you usually pledge the cash surrender value of life insurance or the market value of securities, as a guarantee that your loan will be paid.

Here are some of the advantages of this type of loan. It is easy to obtain; you get the most favorable possible rate, and loan repayment terms can be arranged on a more flexible basis.

If you need a loan, see...
