MEET YOUR POWER PEOPLE

THEY GUARD THE LANDS THAT GUARD YOUR SERVICE

Your Power People include many men who spend all their working time with the soil. They are provided with modern machines which enable them to do a good job of protecting the areas that surround power dams and lakes

Terracing is one of the most successful means of protecting this land . . . which in turn prevents mud and silt from washing into power installations.

Here are shown two of the machines used in conserving and improving farm soil—the terracer and the tractor which powers it.

The men who operate and care for these modern machines are proud of their part in improving the soil and diversifying the crops on lands that guard your electric service.
