Presbyterian Women Observe Birthday Party Tuesday

Fifty-four members attended the annual birthday party of the Women of the Presbyterian church held Tuesday evening in the educational building of the church. Mrs. L. H. Snyder, the president, was in charge of the business part of the meeting.

Mrs. J. H. Winkler, program chairman, presented Mrs. Robin Wooten, a teacher in the North Wilkesboro high school, who gave the number of high school boys and girls graduating last year in the school and the number attending college, also the number of graduates for this spring and the number planning to further their education. Miss Ruth King Wood, director of religious education for the church, told about the religious influence of church schools, and Miss Billy Jo Zimmerman spoke on the lack of religious influence in non-church schools.

The birthday offering received at the regular meeting goes to Student-Work in the General Assembly and to the Texas-Mexican Industrial Institute, these causes being presented by Mrs. T. A. Finley. As the offering was received quiet music was played by Mrs. Gordon Finley and at the close Miss Wood sang "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."

At the close of the meeting the new members of the church since last April received in the Ladies Parlor with members of the Executive Board. New members present were Mesdames James E. Anderson, Robert Taylor, Walter Webster, P. M. Williams, Jr., and Miss Wood. Punch and cookies were served by the Only twenty-five years ago a springhouse was the best refrigeration available on Piedmont farms.

February 27, 1925, the Duke Power Company signed a contract to help introduce electric refrigeration. No other utility company in the South, and only two others in the nation would accept a Kelvinator dealership in the then untried "electric refrigerator".

The Duke network of rural lines was underway, but it was meeting no clamorous demand for power. The average rural home used electricity for a few dangling lights, and eventually an iron. The idea of making ice right in the kitchen was startling, like turning summer into winter!

Breaking down such resistance meant dogged pioneering on a new frontier... a job of education for healthier, more enjoyable living.

In time, the problem of making people want electricity became a problem of meeting demand for it. This is the contrast:

1925—pioneering appliances that nobody wanted and few could afford.

1950—countless thousands of appliances at prices made possible by ever-increasing demand.

These twenty-five years reassure us. They say Keep ahead! You deal in Progress!

Lord Kelvin (1824-1907)

Kelvinator Refrigerators, Home Freezers, and other appliances are named for Lord Kelvin, great Irish-born electrical engineer, physicist, and inventor, who helped to lay the Atlantic Cable and advanced knowledge in every field of energy. Lord Kelvin's tradition of service and devotion to the betterment of life continues in the Kelvinator Laboratories and in the test room of progressive utility companies. There research and testing and ceaseless and untiring... to bring you performance and dependability in electric appliances.
