

RALEIGH ROUNDUP

By EULA NIXON GREENWOOD

POWER AND POWER . . . L. L. Ray, Alamance County native who until a few weeks ago was executive secretary of the N. C. Dairy Products Association, has been succeeded in this position by Lloyd Langdon.

Ray, before he took the dairy job about seven years ago, was a representative of the Duke Power Company. Langdon, prior to coming to Raleigh with the dairymen, was Buncombe County commercial and agricultural agent for the Carolina Power and Light Co. Ray is now in charge of the various foundations at State College and people are already calling him "Doctor" here and there which shows what a college can do for you.

Ray moved to Raleigh three weeks ago, but is still on the go most of the time. For instance, on Monday, July 10, he was in Florida with Agriculture Commissioner L. Y. Ballentine looking over the cattle situation down there. On Tuesday evening, July 11, he was in Boone speaking to the Watauga County Merchants Association. As for Langdon, he is getting closer home, having grown up in Johnston County.

NO BUNCOMBE . . . While in Buncombe, Langdon served for a time as chairman of the Asheville Chamber of Commerce Agricultural Committee and sold the organization on having the Doane Agricultural Service of St. Louis make a survey of the county. As a direct result of the Council's work, 50 Grade A dairies were opened in Buncombe last year, many farmers started growing chickens as a money crop and new agricultural interest was stimulated.

You can very readily see that the light and power which L. L. Ray brought to the dairymen (Coble of Lexington, Chatham of Elkin, Biltmore of Asheville, Foremost of Charlotte, Pine State of Raleigh, Melville of Burlington, Meadows of Leaksville, and other fine dairy plants throughout the State) will continue with Lloyd Langdon.

SURPLUS OR NOT? . . . This column several weeks ago pointed to the fact that Section 20 1-2 of the Appropriations Bill adopted by the 1949 Legislature might knock into a cocked hat any idea of a surplus at the end of the fiscal year which rolled around on June 30.

When the Governor and the 1949 General Assembly were wrestling over how much to raise the teachers, the legislators were fearful that the full increase wanted by Governor W. Kerr Scott might play havoc with the plans for the budget — particularly if bad business set in. So, the legislators gave the pedagogues a great amount of what the Governor and the school people wanted and inserted the section which said the full salary range requested for teachers — $2,200 to $3,100, or as far toward this as the money would go — would be allowed if the State had sufficient funds as of the end of business this fiscal year, which ended on June 30.

HAS IT . . . Well, the State now has that surplus — about $12,000,000. But that old Section 20 1-2 slyly stipulates that the State Board of Education must request the funds for more pay for the teachers. If the Board files application for the money, the State will in all probability find itself short of funds for the 1949-51 biennium.

RED? . . . In other words, the teachers can throw North Carolina into the red within the next eight to 10 months — business remaining as it is — if they want to, and if the Attorney General, Harry McMullan by name, rules that it is legal and constitutional for the State to dip into the middle of the 1949-51 biennium and queer the budget for the remaining year.

The matter will probably not be decided until August. By that time the State will be finished past fiscal year; and on that date the State Board of Education is scheduled to meet.

"UNTO THESE HILLS" . . . In the western part of the State this year — 56 miles west of Asheville in the most beautiful country in Eastern America — another folk drama is in progress and is being most enthusiastically received by thousands of travelers through the mountains. At Cherokee, in the great Smokies, the history of the Cherokee Nation moves across the stage with the solemn strains of "Amazing Grace" as a fitting prelude.

Whereas the "Lost Colony" shows the struggles of our first white settlers with the flat country Indians, "Unto These Hills" portrays the hill country Indians' struggles with the white settlers.

If you have not seen the "Lost Colony," see it this summer by all means. But please do not fall to witness "Unto These Hills." If war fears sweep over you, carry your family today into the heart of the Blue Ridge and live for a few hours with the first Americans. You will find new strength. The sweeping majesty of "Unto These Hills" will overwhelm you and give you new pride in your forerunners.

BRIDGES . . . For many years now residents of Washington, Tyrell, Hyde, and Dare counties have been looking to the day when up-State visitors to Manteo, Nags Head, and other tourist spots of that portion of the North Carolina coast could make the trip without having to virtually dip into Southern Virginia to get there.

Scores of meetings have been held, thousands of pages have been written and countless speeches have been made — not to mention delegations coming to Raleigh — in the interest of having a highway which could swing the visitor through Washington, Tyr-
