

Soil Conservation In Wilkes

By R. E. DUNN and JASPER G. CHIPMAN

The poultry farmers in the community round Champion, N. C. are doing a very good job of soil conservation. The farms being mostly hill country are best suited to pasture and hay crops, and the farmers all seem to believe in right land use. They are using the manure from their poultry house to grow some of the best grass and clover to be found in Wilkes county. Most of the farmers feel like by growing cattle on the pasture, what we might term the second use of their chicken feed will pay almost as much in cattle production and erosion control as did the first use in poultry and eggs.

Edmund McGee a young man who is now studying forestry at N. C. State College has a fine wildlife area on his father's farm just west of Champion. This area, consisting of Bicolor and Serecia Lepepede, was sown over two years ago on land that was not convenient for farming.

Mr. L. G. Triplett, whose farm is near Mt. Pleasant Church informs us that only a few years ago he was advised that his farm was no longer fit for agriculture. But by the use of strict soil and water conservation practices such as right land use and terracing, he now has a beautiful farm of small high producing corn crops and good hay and pasture land.

In reclaiming an old farm down Highway 421 "Dr. Bob" Brame a local druggist, is constructing some very good terraces.

Parkway Event Postponed Year

Blowing Rock — The situation in Korea has postponed the dedication of the Blue Ridge Parkway for a year.

President Truman was scheduled to dedicate the scenic mountain highway at Doughton Park (formerly Bluff Park), and the date was tentatively set for Aug. 12.

However, the Blue Ridge Parkway Associated Chambers of Commerce, meeting here yesterday, decided to postpone the dedication until June of next year. The new tentative date is June 9, 1951, during the height of the purple rhododendron season. The site was not set, but it will be near the North Carolina-Virginia border.

Ben F. Moomaw of Roanoke, Va., a vice-president, made the motion to postpone the dedication when the group was informed President Truman would be unable to attend due to the international situation.

Grover C. Robbins of Blowing Rock, president, said all plans and committees would be held intact for next year. R. Getty Browning, chief locating engineer of the State Highway Commission, is program chairman.

Parkway Superintendent Sam P. Weems of Roanoke, Va., announced that two new links in the parkway would be opened Aug. 12 as scheduled. They are 42 miles between the James River and U. S. 640 in Virginia and about 25 miles between Mount Mitchell and Asheville.
