time. The addition is a matter of much pride to citizens of both towns and they'll especially note that "it's the latest thing." Of course, the "latest thing" is ally as darkness approaches. And when daylight returns, it switches off.

Aromatic Tobacco In Wilkes County

By W. D. LEWIS, Assistant County Agent

Aromatic tobacco growers in Wilkes County have probably the best crop of tobacco since the crop was started in 1947. Farmers have learned through experience the soil that suits the tobacco best and how to fertilize tobacco. J. R. Hendren, Rt. 2, Wilkesboro, has an excellent fourth acre of tobacco that is of even growth. The tobacco is growing with a pale green color and is producing leaves of the desired size and with excellent aroma.

The farmers are doing an excellent job in harvesting and curing the tobacco. Experience taught Ivery Glass and Clyde Call, Route 2, Roaring River, that Aromatic tobacco must be harvest quite green for good quality. They started harvesting about the middle of June and have harvested the tobacco each week. They will complete harvest in about three weeks.

While not new in the field of electricity, these devices are making appearances for the first time on individual light poles in this section. The lamps here are operated by a similar method, but a master switch is used for all stations. At Ronda and Jonesville, individual units for each post are employed.

D. G. Smith, manager of the Elkin branch of Duke Power Company, explained that the photoelectric units in each lamp are controlled much like the electric-eye doors which open and shut when a beam of light is broken. When sufficient light is returned the lamps cut off.

Such controls are of a distinct advantage. Darkness sometimes comes prematurely on stormy days. A master switch regulated by computation of light and darkness for a given day is not accurate enough. With the new devices the degree of need for light is met certainly by the amount of light in the air.

Couple, in 70's, Get Annulment

Sherfield, England, Aug. 10—A Sheffield divorce court today annulled the marriage of a 74-year-old man and a 71-year-old woman because, it was testified, the wife willfully refused to consummate the marriage. The decree was granted to Charles Kay, who married Charlotte Kay, then a widow, in 1946.
