POETICAL.

From the Bunner of the South CLEOPATRA DYING

BY HERMINE.

Glorious victim of my magic! Runed by my potent spell, From the world's imperial station, Have I dragged thre down to Hell! Fallen Chieftain! Unthroned Monarch! Lost through doning love for mel Fast, on shades of night eternal. Wings my soul its Il gh: to thee!

Ceasar shall not gace his triouph. With proud Egypt's captive Queen! Boothed to sleep by aspic kisses, Soon my heart on time shall lean Soon my life like Lotus blossoms, Swift shall glide on Charon's stream Clasped once more in thy embraces, Love shall prove an endless dream!

Irast Chamian! Bind my tresses! Place the crown above my brow? Touch these bands and take these kisses-Authory reproves not now; Gods! my lips breath the poisoned vapors They have struck my Chamian dead! Foolish minion durst proceede me, Where my sprit's Lord has field!

None shall meet his smile before me, None within his arms repose; Be his heart's impassioned fires, Quenched upon my bossom's snows! None shall share his burning kisses, Ere I haste me to his side! Octavia's tears may prove her widowed-

See! My courage claims the title-Closer press the aspic fangs, Memories of his quickened touches Sweeten now these deadly pangs! Honor, manhood, glory's teaching, All, he bartered for my smile, Twined his heart-stings round my fingers

Vibrant to their touch the while.

Cleopatra's still his bride!

Pollowed fast my silver rulder, Fled from Ceasar's scornful eye, Heeded not his bleeding honor, Glad upon my breast to he! Then I snared him in my meshes, Bound him with my wily art, From the head of congrering legions, Snatched him captive to my heart.

Wild his soul at my caresses! Weak his soul at my command ! Rome, with fury, saw her mightiest Bowed beneath a woman's hand! Noblest of the noble Romans; Greatest of the Emperors thee; Thou didst fling away kingdom-Egypt gives herself to thee

Sweet as balm. Most soft and gentle Drains the asp my tailing breath Antony! Lord! My Lover! Stretch thine arms to me in death. Guide me through these deepening shadow Faint my heart and weak my knees: Glorious victim! Rained hero! Cleopatra dies for thee!

MURDER WILL OUT.

A gifted legal friend of this town gave us the following account of a heartless murder, and its final revelation, that took place in this State many years ago A man by the name of J—, of Wayne Co., N. C., sold a free negro (whom he had cheated into the belief that he was but biring) to a gentleman whom we will call Brown, in one of the adjacent districts of South Carolina. Sometime afterwards Bown discovered the trand, and immedi- Dealer in Groceries ately wrote to J-, from whom he had purchased him in Wayne county, that if he paid back the money he had paid him for the free negro he would not prosecute him, and besides keep it a profound se cret. To this Mr. J- replied he would gladly do so, and urged Mr. Brown to come for it immediately, and closed by assuring him of his gratitude that he had spared his family the humiliation of a public disclosure. Mr. Brown, therefore, left his home on horseback for Wayne county, and, upon reaching the residence of Mr. J-, he was kindly received and sumptuously entertained. The money was paid over to him, and he was prevail ed on to spend several days with the family and enjoy the sports of the country. After a very pleasant sojourn of a week he started for his home, in South Carolifamily that he might have a safe journey, and return of en to enjoy their hospitalities. Several weeks after his departure letters were received from Mr. Brown's family, making enquiry for him, and stating that he had not returned to his home Search and enquiry however proved fruitless: Mr. Brown never returned. Mr. J-who had sold the free negro never ap peared at his case afterwards; but it was thought to be owing to the unaccountable and mysterious, disappearance of Mr. Brown, who had been his guest. Years afterwards, and not long ago, Mr. Jon his death-bed, urged his family and friends not to bury him in the family grave yard. He was very vehement in this request, but it was presumed to be but a vagury of his deceased brain, and his dying wishes were therefore disregarded. His remains were carried to the family burying ground and the grave digger commenced his work; but, when he had reached a certain depth, his spady struck ! a solid object-obstructions which upon their removal, proved to be the skeletons of a man and horse, with the irons of a eaddle; the iron buttons, too, upon the EVERY OTHER KIND OF skeleton were found to be the same that Mr. Brown had worn.

Thus, even at the grave before the clods of the valley had shut him out forever from the light of day, surrounded by those who had met to do honor to his memory, without judge or jury, these silent witnesses. his own dread of the spot, the ghastly skeleton, with grinning teeth and sightless nounced him, to the judgment of all present no appeal from this decision. Of a truth, "murter will out!" - Wadesboro Argus.
