Here is a rich man's son, who has been ducated at great expense and who has graduated from college, and has come out a gentleman. He has studied, not with a view of fitting himself for any avocation in life, but with the view of being a gentleman. He reads, not for the sake of knowing anything, but for the sake of being a gentleman. Soon, his father twenty-vive years old, finds himself a poor man's son, and dependent on his own exertions. And he says to himself-What shall I do for a living ?" He asks his feet, and his feet say-"I do not know." He asks his hands, and they say - "I do not know." He aske his head. and it says-"I never learned anything about how to get a living " There is but one man that can befriend this poor wretch and that is the sexton. WONDERFUL.

A most extraordinary explosion took place a few days ago. A woman living in the suburbes had a goose, of which she made a pet, and would shoot grains of corn, bread crumbs, &c., at him, all of which he shoveled up greedily. On the day in question, his gooseship came to grief by this very habit of his. Some little boys were throwing large torpedoes about and one of them dropped without exploding; the goose took it for a grain of corn and gobbled it up in a twinkling, but in swallowing it, it exploded blowing the whole top of his head off.

, Charlottesville Chronicle.

Home, says Roberson, in his sermons, is the place in all this world where hearts are sure of each other. It is the place of confidence. It is the place where we tear off that mark of guarded and suspicious coldness which the world forces us to wear in self-defence, and where we pour out the unreserved communications of full and confiding hearts. It is where expressions of tenderness gush out without any dread of ridicule. Let a man travel where he will, home is the place to which his heart untraveled fondly turns. He is to double all pleasure there. He is to divide all pain. A happy home is the sinsensibilities.
