I will not undertake to repeat his address, nowing my inability to do him justice. Only few of his words can I command. He said at during his occupancy of high trusts in the evice of his country, and pending the last efat of his friends to elevate him to the highest dation man can occupy on earth, he had many derings of much value bestowed on him, which regretted to say were received with misgivgs, fearing they might be offered from interand motives, and that he had resolved, in case had been elevated to the Presidential chair, would publicly announce his determination is scrept no more presents from any source; but how happy was he now to have it in his jower to say, that since his defeat the offerings what he now believed were of pure friendhip had been quadrupled; he now feared that had misjudged the motives of his friends; he sold buly say in apology for his mistake, that is then felt it would have been arrogance in im to have believed that his countrymen held im in so high esteem.

This letter is dated the 18th, and we add from he Louisville Courier of the same date the folowing extract :

Mr. Clay appeared to be in excellent health ad spirits: Time seems to make little impreswa upon him. In figure he is as erect and comanding, and in muscular and mental vigor and nightliness, he seems to be as juvenile, as he is fficen years ago. He looks, talks and valles like one of the old Roman stock, most of rhom have fallen into their graves, but all of whom have shed immortal lustre upon the history of their country.

[From the National Intelligencer.] THE "NEW BOOKS"-AGAIN.

The Editor of the "Union" must have a very poor opinion of the Intelligence of his readen, if he expects, under a cloud of such mystileahou as occupies a column of his paper of Thursday night, to escape from responsibility for the glaring misrepresentation of Whig princoles and Whig practices which we have convicted him of putting forth some days ago, under the head of "The New Books." This aisrepresentation was, we have no doubt, the misequence of misinformation, and not of inlention; but, when proved, the Union should are retracted it, and thrown the blame upon minlormers, and not made it worse by a blundering attempt to change the issue.

The issue made by the Union did not consist all parade of figures, showing that the public telt was, on the 4th of March, 1845, more than was on the 4th of March, 1841, by ten milons of dollars; for we did not dispute its figures, but look them upon its own showing. The therefore, repeated in the Union of Thursday night were not "the material perfions "of his first article, as now averred. The naterial portion of that article was the follow-

This is the "material portion" of the first atticle of the "Union," and the only portion that possessed any materiality; and of this porion the only averment that is true is, that the whigs, whilst they held the power in Congress, increased the taxes." They did so by enactby the wise and beneficent Tariff of 1842, which rescued the Government from bankrupt-

LATE FROM MEXICO.

The barque Ann Louisa arrived at New York on Thursday morning, from Vera Cruz, whence she sailed on the 14th ultimo. Our last dates by way of New Orleans were to November 30.

The Journal of Commerce learns, verbally that our Minister, the Hon. John Slidell, had arrived at the Mexican Capital. The sloop of war St. Mary's, which carried him out, was to leave Vera Cruz on the next day (15th) for Pensacola .-The United States brig Porpoise, which carried out Mr. Parrott, was also at Vera Cruz, waiting orders.

The paragraph below, translated from a city of Mexico paper of December 3rd, seems to show that there is no truth in a late rumor (received by way of New Orleans) that Gen. Paredes and his army had pronounced against the Government. This is regarded as favorable to the success of Mr. Slidell's mission.

" Mexico, Dec. 3 .- On various occasions the enemies of General Paredes have propagated rumors to his disadvantage, even asserting that this worthy chief was going to pronounce, with the army under his command, for a plan of dictatorship.

* We, who have always contradicted such assertions, publish a communication however, put the Convention into a diffifrom said General to the Supreme Government, in which he states that, having learned that Colonel Marco Barragan had started a rumor that his Excellency was going to pronounce for a dictatorship, he (Paredes) had ordered proceedings to be commenced against him.

"We publish this letter, not for the purpose of proving the integrity and good faith of General Paredes, (for as to this there is no kind of doubt.) but to show to the public the malignity of those who have sought to injure his well-earned reputa-

FRIDAY MORNING.

WHIG CONVENTION.

This body assembled in the Commons Hall on Monday last; and it was cheering to the heart of every true Whig to behold such a large assemblage of the talented and patriotic sons of the Old North State, and the noble spirit of liberality towards their opponents, as well as harmony and unanimity among themselves, which they manifested.

Dr. Frederick J. Hill, of Brunswick, was chosen President of the Convention, and a better selection could not have been made. E. J. Hale, Esq., and Maj. H. W. Husted of Raleigh, were appointed Secretaries.

The Address of Dr. Hill, on taking the Chair, was one of the best speeches of the kind we ever heard, and was received, as it deserved, In and restored the public credit from the dis- with the most rapturous applause. DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

The Raleigh Star of the 14th instant, says: The Democratic Convention, which assembled in this city, on the 8th instant, nominated Green W. Caldwell, Esq. Mr. Henry, the President of the body, is said, remarked in his inaugural, that he had no more respect for certain Whig leaders: such as Daniel Webster, &c. "than he had for a parcel of sheep-stealing dogs!" and was greatly applauded! Mr. Venable, Gen. Saunders, Judge Strange Mr. Ellis, Mr. Disbrow, Col. Wheeler, and Messrs. Smith of Orange & McRae of Raleigh, all addressed the Conventoon with much animation, and some of them with no little abuse of their opponents. We Lexington, Jan. 12, 1846:3t Commissioners. cannot think that such a spirit will meet the approprirtion of the people of N. Carolina. Their resolutions, we learn, take the same stand for Oregon that the aboliit is ours, and we will have it.

Look out for Counterfeits.

We learn from the Raleigh Register of the 13th inst that counterfeit Ten Dollar Notes upon the Bank of the State of North Carolina, has been put in circulation in the Western part of the State. The one we have seen, says the Register, is Letter A, No. 669, dated Jan. 1st, day of Court,) 1844, payable to A. Smith, at Raleigh. Vignette, a naked Female figure and Sailor with ship in the distance. On the right end female figure and ship, on the left, portrait of Washington; all totally unlike the genuine Bill, which has a view of the State Capitol in the Vignette, and a full length of Canova's Statue of Washington at each end. The signature of the President in the counterfeit, is engraved as a fac similie-that of the Cashier is written and badly done. It may be detected at once, by observing that the title, " Bank of the State of North Carolina," in the genuine notes, is over the Vignette, while in the counterfeit, it is at the side and beneath.

Counterfeit Four dollar notes are also in circulation, on the same Bank. The Bank has no plates, either of Principal or Branch notes, at all resembling the one used for the counterfeit.
