From the Fayetteville Carolinian.

Plank Road Route .- A friend to Fayeneville, and a gentleman of good judgment, in writing a private letter to us, rives his opinion about the route of the Plank Road. And as our people are anxions to hear all suggestions, we make an extract from his letter, which we presume will not be particularly objectionable to him as follows :

plank Road. It appears to me the only caution. one which can benefit your town would he to follow the route surveyed for the Rail Road several years since, passing in the upper end of Richmond county and striking the Pee Dee River near the mouth of Rocky River; and thence by Albemarle to Salisbury. You would by this means pass through the fine cotton growing region of the upper end of Richmond and the lower end of Montgomery; and no doubt get the cotton for your place which now goes to Cheraw. You will by this means approach Anson near e- tinctions. nough to get some of her cotton. If your road runs by either of the other routes, it passes through sections which already trade with you, and only increases their the non proscriptive policy upon which Virginfacilities for transportation."

This is the route most desired by the people of Salisbury, and we feel confident that if the road is made to touch Gold-Hill which is directly on the route, a far greater amount of Stock will be taken by the people of Rowan than if it be run in any other direction. The energetic citizens of that thriving place, too, will besir themselves, and doubtless do the handsome thing, as they are so well able to do. Aplank road between Salisbury and Gold-Hill would be valuable stock even though add not go a foot beyond either place. But if it forms a part of the road to Fayetteville, there remains no doubt at all, but that it will prove the most valuable section of the whole work.

Messrs. Editors :- I frankly and willingly confess I was a few days since deeply mortified, and humbled at a fact recently blazoned forth in a respectable periodical of extensive circulation in the United States, viz: that by the census of 1840, the astounding truth is revealed, that in North Carolina there are 2502 distilleries, and 56,609 persons who cannot read or write-while in the State of Massachusetts there are only 37 distilleries and 4861

You will see by a little calculation that jour proportion of distilleries is more than eighty to one, and, of those who are unable to read or write more than twelve to one compared with Massachusetts. Now is there a connection hetween ignorance, and the prevalence of distilleries, as cause and effect ? This is a ques. tion I do not pretend to decide; one thing is certain both greatly prevail in our good old North State, and a further examination will show that there is as great a proportional numher who can neither read nor write-and in no other State, small or great, are there much over half the number of distilleries, Tennes. see and Virginia having only a fraction over half our number. I belong not, Messrs. Editors, to the Sons of Temperance, but these facts show that they deserve the good opinion of the country as philanthropists and as patriots. Nor do I make sweeping denunciations against the distillers of ardent spirits in North Carolina or elsewhere! and the abounding ignorance that surrounds! No! I desire to present facts not to the gaze of the world, but to ourselves. An evil can only be conquered by first looking it full in the face; or in some other way becoming fully convinced of its existence. I have not the statistics before me to tell what portion of our State furnishes the greatest numher of distilleries, nor do I know whether the Western or Eastern portions of the State furnish the greatest number who cannot read or write,-but think it will be found much the greatest in the middle and western counties. If so, why is it? First, our roads and rivers furnish us with no adequate means of transportation for heavy agricultural productions, hence much is converted into brandy and whiskey, thus making them portable for market, as the venders will say. There is more of truth and more of necessity in this than at first view seems to present itself. But does this justify it? And is there not an influence, a debasing influence upon public morals and intelligence, Mr. Evans has accepted the appointment of that acts—and re-acts in such a manner as directly or indirectly tends to keep up the evils thus brought before us? How is it, that while so much has been done by other States in Internal Improvements, and much comparatively for the Eastern portion of our own State; so little, so very little has been done for Western North Carolina?

The fault is in a great measure our own! We sit in apathy and indifference, in ignorance and in stupidity, leaving others with less natural advantages to reap golden harvests, and feasts of increasing knowledge-while we, as a community, with few, very few exceptions, sit still in ignorance and stupidity, with only now and then an occasional groan of complaint,

The truth is, "the foundations of the great at Halifax. The news will be expressed, as deep must be broken up" (if I may use such a before, across the country to St. Johns, and metaphor,) before we can see; and before we can be brought to act energetically for our own

If we are to judge from past with sales of 12,000 bus. Yellow, 55 to 57. experience, we must answer this in the negative. But we live in an age of progression and of unprecedented improvement, and we cannot but be convinced that something must be done, and done speedily, to check the increase of emigration and to better our own condition. Now, will we take hold of the great Central Rail Road? Will our great capitalists do any thing in this matter? I fear but little! Who then must do the work? The men with small means-if it is ever done; must do the

It is useless, and worse than useless, to expect much from any portion of the State where the road does not pass. Wilmington has her hands full with her own road-Raleigh and its neigh. hors as much as they can do to rebuild the Raleigh and Gaston Rail Road. Fayetteville and its interests; its Plank Road.
