On the white wing of peace floated off in the west. As I threw back my tresses to catch the cool breeze, That scattered the rain drops and dimpled the seas, Far up the blue sky a fair rainbow unrolled Its suft-timed pinions of purple and gold ; Twas born in a moment, yet, quick as its birth, It had stretched to the uttermost ends of the earth,

And, fair as an angel, it floated all free, With a wing on the earth and a wing on the sea How calm was the ocean! how gentle its swell! Like a woman's soft bosom it rose and it fell. While its light sparkling waves, stealing laughingly o'er, When they saw the fair rainbow knelt down to the

No sweet hymn ascended, no murmur of grayer, Yet I felt that the spirit of worship was there. And bent my young head in devotion and love, Neath the form of the angel that floated above.

How wide was the sweep of its beautiful wings; How boundless its circle! how radiant its rings! If I looked on the sky 'twas suspended in air, If I looked on the ocean the rainbow was there; Thus forming a girdle as brilliant and whole As the thoughts of the rainbow that circled my soul Like the wing of the Deity, calmiy unfirled, It bent from the cloud and encircied the world.

There are moments, I think, when the spirit receives Whole volumes of thought on its unwritten leaves, When the folds of the heart in a moment unclose, Like the innermost leaves from the heart of the rose And thus, when the rainbow has passed from the sky, The thoughts it awake were too deep to pass by; It left my full soul like the wing of a dove, All flattering with pleasure, and fluttering with love. I know that each moment of rapture or pain But shortens the links in life's mystical claim ; Eknow that my form, like the bow of the wave, Must pass from the earth and lie cold in the grave;

Yet, oh! when death's shadows my bosom uncloud,

May hope, like the rainbow, my spirit enfold

In her beautiful pinions of purple and gold.

A COLD WATER SKETCH.

A lot of idlers stood upon the end of a pier which ran out into the Hudson river, in one of the small towns near Albany, a few days ago, amusing themselves with hurling stones into the broad stream, each vicing with the other in the endeavor to pitch a missile at the farthest distance from the shore, when a tall, rugged-built Vermonter, direct from the Green'Hills, soddenly made his appearance in their midst, and for a while remained a quiet observer of their movements.

He was a brawny-looking Yankee, and was very decently clad. The efforts of the little party had been exhibited over and over again, when the stranger quietly picked up half a brick which lay near him, and, giving it a jerk, it fell into the water a long way beyond the line which had as yet been reached by the foremost of the crowd. At the conclusion of this feat a loud "bravo!" went up from half a dozen voices around him.

It was a cold, clear day in October, and the men determined not to be outdone, renewed flieir attempts; but the Vermonter, without saying a sylable to any one, continued to pitch the pebbles far into the stream, which seemed to annoy one of them, in a green jacket, the apparent leader of the gang, who declared he wouldn't be beaten by a " feller right straight out o' the woods no how;" and sidling up to the stranger, he determined to make his acquaintance.

"Where do you come from neighbor?" inquired the other.

"Me? wal, I hails from Varmout jes naow. friend: "Haint been in these parts long. I

"Not much," answered the crowd. We aint very green, down here in York, we aint," said the fellow in the green jacket, " we've been about you see." "Well, jes yeou look yere friend," con-

"Done," said the Yankee ; and drawing forth an X. (upon a broken down east bank) he covered the bragger's shinplas-

"Kin veoû swim, feller ?"-"Like a duck," said the green jacket. Without farther parley, the Vermonter seized the knowing Yorker stoutly by the mape of the neck and the seat of his unmentionables, jerked him from his footbold, and with almost superhuman effort, dashed the hully heels over head from the dock,

THE SKINNING SYSTEM.

Dollar Newspaper.

In the last communication I promised to give you a few practical hints on the importance of deep culture, as the subject has been canvassed to considerable length in your interesting paper, I shall be brief and to the point.

In the first place I will make the assertion, that every farmer who cultivates a permanent improvement in the soil unss he resorts to deep culture. For this as the reason—that unless the land is broken up and pulverized to a considerable depth. so as to absorb quickly the heavy dashing rains that fall through the summer season, the soil will become liquid, and wash off into the ravines, and leave nothing behind but hard sub soil, that the water could not penetrate, perfectly destitute of all vegetable matter, for the basis of a future crop. This is an action which every practical farmer will admit.

Secondly.—That all lands, whether rolling or level, are benefitted by deep culture, except those of a loose sand, being destitute of a clay sub soil.

What farmer who practices "the skinning system" has not after a long period of heavy and dashing rains seen his corn turn yellow and wither, on account of the water standing around the plants, the retentive sub-soil not permitting it to pass into the earth. Let him go into the same field after at few days of hot sun, and examine the consistency of the soil that was a few days before a perfect quagmire. He will, I think, find it baked in a hard mass, that no plough or cultivator can pulverize, or roots penetrate, and so it must remain until the next winter for farmer Jack Frost to do it for him.

It will be admitted by all, that the farther roots of plants can penetrate in the soil in search of food and moisture, so will the crop be benefitted. The roots of red top clover (the great basis on which most soils are improved) sometimes extend two and three feet in the ground and invariably leave a rich mould wherever they decompose. Hence deep culture is actual ly necessary to insure a good depth of loam and a permanent improvement in all soils, with the exception of the one before

Some farmers, wedded to the "skinning system," argue that if they turn under what little loam they have they will ruin their land. They do not think that may turn up a subsoil rich in potash or nitrogen, and thus expose a new surface to the action of the frost and atmosphere, that must prove beneficial in the end. Have none of the advocates of shallow ploughing, beheld the luxuriant crops of grass and weeds that grow spontaneously Catharine Neely and others. Also in earth dug from cellars or wells and on the sides of ditches. Why then is not the soil as rich twelve inches below the surface as it is in twelve feet. A little judgment ought to be used in breaking up of those lands deficient in vegetable mould. They ought to be fallowed late in the fall if the sub-soil is clay During the winter spread your manure on the surface, and in the spring harrow down and plant in some crop that requires frequent ploughing and cultivating to be followed by clover with oats or wheat; keep the young clover from being grazed by the stock, and a permanent improvement to the land is the result.

It is too late in the day for farmers now to advocate "the skinning system." That has had its day and is now classed with the age of barbarism, as the old worn out fields of Maryland could youch. Let some of your skeptical farmers visit Montgomery county, part of Prince George's, and Howard District, and see the changes that have been wrought by deep ploughing and the use of chemical manures in the last ten years.
