

shall be, and receive weekly, not less than three dollars; except it be shown through sickness or disability he brought on by his own imprudent conduct.

3d. No brother residing within five miles of the division of which he is a member, shall be entitled to benefit for more than one week previous to his case being reported to such division. No benefits shall be granted for a less time than one week. All arrears, either for dues or fines, shall in every case be deducted from the next payment.

Sec. 4. In case of the death of a brother entitled to benefits, the sum of thirty dollars shall be appropriated as a funeral benefit. The W. P. in the absence of competent relations or friends, shall take charge of the funeral, and keep an account of the disbursements.

5th. On the death of the wife of a brother, also beneficial, he shall be entitled to the sum of fifteen dollars, as a funeral benefit.

Art. 7. Officers.—Sec. 1. Any member who shall offend against these Articles, or the By-Laws, shall be subject to be fined, reprimanded, suspended or expelled, as two-thirds of the members present, at any regular meeting, may determine.

2d. Every member shall be entitled to a fair trial for any offence involving reprimand, suspension, or expulsion; but no member shall be put on trial, unless charges, duly specifying his offence, be submitted in writing by a member of the Division.

3d. When charges have been preferred against a brother in a proper manner, or any matters of grievance between brothers are brought before the Division, they shall be referred to a special committee of five members, who shall, with as little delay as the case will admit, summon the parties, examine and determine the matter in question; and if their decision does not involve the suspension or expulsion of a member, and an appeal be taken from it to the Division, it shall be final, without other action. Should the committee be convinced of the necessity of suspending or expelling a member, they shall submit a motion for the purpose to the division for action.

4th. When a motion for the expulsion or suspension of a member shall have been submitted in due form, it shall be announced at one regular meeting previous to the meeting at which the motion shall be taken, and the member to be expelled or suspended, shall be notified in writing of the motion, and of the time when it may have been determined to consider the question—at which time, whether the implicated member be present or not, the Division may proceed to consider and determine it. Two-thirds of the members present voting in favor of the motion, it shall be carried; and the Division shall be fully competent, while such motion is under consideration, to vary the penalty from the original motion.

Sec. 5th. When the decision of a committee appointed under Sec. 3d. of this Article, otherwise final, shall not be satisfactory to all parties, either of those interested shall have the privilege of an appeal to the Division; and at the time appointed for trying the appeal, the committee shall present to the Division, and an appeal be taken, which their decision was founded; and the parties shall have the privilege of being heard before the Division—and the Division shall determine the correctness of the decision of the committee by a majority vote present.

6th. Any member having been expelled, shall not be proposed for membership under six months from the date of expulsion.

7th. The provisions of this Article shall not extend to violations of Article II.

Art. VIII. Terms.—Regular Quarterly Terms shall commence on the first of October, January, April and July. Officers elected previous to the expiration of half the Term, shall be entitled to the full honors of the Term; those elected after half the Term has expired shall not count the honors, except where they may be needed to fill vacancies occasioned by resignation, suspension, expulsion, or death, in which case the brother who serves the residue of the Term shall be entitled to the full honors, and he who resigns, or is suspended or expelled, shall forfeit his claim.

Art. IX. Eligibility for Chief Officers.—1. After a Division has been instituted three terms, no brother shall be eligible to the office of W. P., unless he has served a regular quarterly term as W. A., nor shall any brother be eligible to the office of W. A., unless he has served two terms in a subordinate office or offices.

Sec. 2. No brother shall serve two terms in the same office, during the term of one year, except in the offices of R. S., F. S. and T.

3d. No brother shall be eligible to office who is under twenty-one years of age.

Art. X. Violating Article II.—1. Any member who knows a brother to have violated Article II, and neglects to prefer the charge and specify the offense to the Division within three weeks after the violation shall have come to his knowledge, shall be fined one dollar.

2d. The charge for violation of Article II, shall be presented in writing, duly signed, when it shall be referred to a committee of five members, who shall, as soon as practicable, summon the parties, and investigate the matter.

Sec. 3d. The committee shall organize by appointing a chairman and secretary. The secretary shall make a correct record of the proceedings, with such testimony as may be presented, which record shall be produced to the Division on the call of any member, after the committee have reported.

4th. If the committee agree that the charge is sustained, they shall report the fact to the Division, by resolution, with a record of the proceedings, and the brother be reinstated or expelled, as the case may be— which report and resolutions shall lie upon the table at least one week, and the offending brother shall be notified of the character of the resolutions, by the R. S., and requested to be present at the time appointed for considering the same, with a view of giving him an opportunity to make a defence.

5th. If the committee agree that the charge is not sustained, they shall report a resolution to that effect, and if the resolution be adopted, the charge shall be dismissed.

Sec. 6th. When the committee report the charge sustained, and a majority of the members present at a regular meeting ballot in favor thereof, the offending member shall forfeit his membership, and the W. P. shall direct his name to be erased from the Constitution. If a majority of the Division vote in opposition to the resolution, all further proceedings shall be stayed.

7th. If two-thirds of those voting are in favor of reinstating a member who has been found guilty of violating Article II, he shall be restored to membership by re-signing the constitution, and paying, for the first offence, one dollar, and for the second offence, two dollars, which shall be paid to the F. S. by the meeting succeeding the vote, of the member to stand suspended until the fine is paid. The power to reinstate, however, shall not extend over the term of one month from the time the offence was committed.

[To be concluded.]

EVENING SOLACE
BY CURSER BELL.

The human heart has hidden treasures,
In secret kept, in silence sealed;
The thoughts, the hopes, the dreams, the pleasures,
Whose charm were broken if revealed,
And days may pass in gay confusion,
And nights in noisy riot,
While lost in Time or Wealth's illusion,
The memory of the Past may die.

But, there are hours of lovely musing,
Such as in evening silence come,
When soft as birds their pinions closing,
The hearts best feelings gather home,
Then, in our soul there seems to languish
A tender grief that is not wrong;
And thoughts that once were groans of anguish,
Now cause but some mild tears to flow.

And feelings once as strong as passions,
Float softly back—a faded dream,
Our own sharp griefs and wild sensations,
The tale of others sufferings seem.
Oh! when the heart is freshly bleeding,
How long it is for that time to be,
When, through the mists of years receding,
Its woes but live in memory!

And it can dwell on moonlight glimmer,
On evening shade and loneliness,
And while the sky grows dim and dimmer,
Feel no untold and strange distress—
Only a deeper impulse given;
By lonely hour and darkened room,
To solemn thoughts that soar to heaven,
Seeking a life and world to come.

THE GERANIUM PLANT.
BY MRS. L. H. SIOURNEY.

Flowers have a magic power to reach the associations of their days. Though our path may have led over the steep and hony places of the world, for many years, yet the unexpected sight of the pale grass flowers, and yellow kin-cups, we gathered in childhood, brings back the cool fragrance of life's early morning. If the wearied traveller chance to find in foreign climes such plants as he culled by the singing brook of his native glen, the broad-leaved Iris or the bright crimson Lobelia, straightway he is a boy again, and sheds them fondly into his mother's lap. The hoary woman, unto whom there remaineth little, save the arm chair in the chimney-corner, and the oft-repeated counsel to her grand-children—if she see, among his lustrous green leaves, the pure white Camellia, remembers the thrill with which its cool petals drooped over her forehead at her bridal, and is lost amid the wanderings of fairy land.

The smile, or the breath of our familiar home-flowers, restore to us, in after life, the carelessness of those days, when, half in ignorance, and half in faith, we planted the rootless stem of some rich blossom, that had been given us, and heaped the fresh soil tenderly around it, and watered it every moment, and visited it with hope, until it was as brown and dead as the mould by which it was encompassed. They recall the reckless curiosity with which we dug up the bulb of our tulip, or tube-rose, and found them busy at their work of germination, which our impatience interrupted, perhaps destroyed.

Distant places and absent friends are brought near by the touch of the talisman. The odor of a pressed flower, between the leaves of a long closed book, restores the voice, the form of the loved one who placed it there, whose home may now be in the tomb. I had sought the sweet trailing arbutus among the wilds of my native place, when life was new, and a box of it recently performed a journey of many miles to visit me. The moment it was opened, while its fragrance overpowered every sense, every breathing blossom spoke of the rocks which we used to climb in pursuit of it, and of the rough falling waters that filled every pause in my merry voices, and then suddenly my playmates stood beside me, their baskets overflowing with the gifts of early spring, themselves still young and spring like, though on the heads of some I knew that the frost had settled, and that over others rested the green sod.

Still more eloquent, was a slender plant of the rose-geranium, which accompanied me something more than two years since, on my visit to an older World. It was taken from her quiet bed in her garden, by my little daughter, as the parting time drew near, with the remark that something green might look pleasant to me upon the sea! And so it did. But I imagined not then the depth of communion it would call forth. For the home-spirit was in its heart, and it became to me as a friend. Sometimes when evening closed in over the deep, with those heavy sighs of the wind which often betoken a coming storm, and the ship leaped and plunged amid the billows, as if seeking for a place to escape, or a depth to hide in, I have drawn closer to that weak plant, as if its love might comfort me. Or at waking in the morning and raising my head from the coffin like berth where the dark hours had passed in such broken slumbers, I have fixed my eyes first upon that solitary plant and spoken softly to it as a child. Yet it was evidently in an uncgenial atmosphere, and the delicate branches grew sad and faded. I numbered its leaves, but almost every day some of them grew sickly and fell, until at last only a few were left clustering round a single graceful stalk.

We had been thirteen days and nights upon the great deep, and accomplished nearly two thousand miles of our watery journey, when I awoke at the grey hour of dawn. I remembered, it was the first anniversary of the death of my beloved, father, and beckoned the sun-mimic imagery to meet me amid the waves. At once every circumstance of that scene gleamed forth as in picture.—His venerable head resting upon its white pillow; the brightness of his beautiful hair, on which four-score and seven winters had scattered no snows, his heavy breathing mingling with the slow dropping of the summer shower up on the vine leaves at the casement, and the steady ticking of the clock through that lonely night, while bending over him, I hoped against hope, that the sudden illness might not be mortal, and that the form which but the day before had moved with so vigorous a step, would yet rise up and lean upon its staff, and come forth to bless me. The rain ceased, a circle of faint brightness foretold the rising of the sun—those precious lips uttered again the sound of kind words—the opening eyes told their message of saintly love—the lids fluttered and closed. There was no more breath.

A wail!—Another, piercing and protracted—deeper even than that which with an only child mourns the last of parents. It must be the wail of a mother. No other sorrow hath such a voice. Yet, so abruptly it broke forth, amid surrounding silence, that, for a moment, memory was bewildered, and the things that had been, mingled their confused tissue with things that are.

Among our passengers was a dignified and accomplished lady, returning with her husband, and officer, from a residence of several years in Canada, to England, their native land. They had with them three little daughters, and in the course of those conversations which beguile the tedium of sea-life, she had sometimes spoken of the anxiety with which her aged mother waited to welcome these decendants, born in a foreign clime, whom, of course, she had never seen, and so exquisite was their beauty, that it would not have been surprising had a thrill of pride heightened the pleasure with which she painted the joy of such a meeting. The youngest was a babe of less than a year, and we who often shared his playful wile, fancied that it had grown languid, as if from some inherent disease. Yet its large black eyes still beamed with strange lustre, so that neither parents nor nurse would allow that aught affected it, save what arose from the change of habits incidental to the confinement of the ship. Yet that night, the mother more uneasy than she was willing to confess in words, decided not to leave its cradle. In the saloon adjoining our state-room, she took her place, and when we retired, the fair infant lay in a troubled sleep. Yet even then the spoiler was nearer to it than the mother, and ere the morning, he smote it in her arms. We found her clasping it closely to her bosom, as if fain to revivify it with her breath.—Masses of glossy black hair, escaping from their confinement, fell over her shoulders and dropped as a curtain over the marble features of the dead. Mingled with gasps of grief that shook her like a reed, were exclamations of hope—that hope which clings to the wounded heart—striking its fibre wherever the blood drop oozes, and striving like a pitying angel to staunch where it may not heal. "Constance! Constance! look at me—Oh, my dear husband, she will live again. She has been sicker than this, once when you were away. Yes, yes—she will breathe again! Long she continued thus assuaging her bitter sorrow with this vanity of trust, and then we tenderly strove to loosen her convulsive grasp from the lifeless idol. After we had prevailed, and it was borne from her sight, we still heard in the pauses of the soothing voice with which her husband sought to console her, the wild cry, "She will breathe again! John! John! I saw her sweet lips move when they took her from me. My baby will live again!"

It was laid out on a sofa in the lady's cabin, in a pure white robe, its brow surpassingly beautiful and the deeply fringed lids but imperfectly closed over the large, lustrous eyes. The black lace veil of the mother shaded its form and features, and through it was clearly visible the last green slip of my rose-geranium. It was my gift to the dead, and pressed into that little pale hand not without a tear. This was the last office of that cherished plant, which had left its own home in the quiet gardens of New England to do this service to faded innocence, and itself to die. Happy shall we be, if, in the closing of our own frail life, we like this trembling voyager, leave behind a gleam of light and consolation, as the olive-leaf above the flood, or the dove, whose last act was peace, ere it entered re-joining into the Ark, to be a wanderer no more.—Ladies Companion.

Among the eighty passengers by the Europa was Com. Foxall A. Parker, U. S. Navy, who recently went to Europe on a mission connected with the organization of the German Navy. Since then the American and the Cunard steamers United States, Acadia, and Britannia have been purchased for that purpose. The return of Com. P. has probably something to do with the outfit of the United States, and securing the services of other American naval officers.
