RURAL CONVENIENCES AND ANIMAL COMFORTS.

Very few persons fully realize the beau ideal of comfort in the country, although it is by no means very difficult of attainment. Luxuries of the first class, may be supplied by the fruit and kitchen garden, the orchard, and through a well kept stock of domestic animals. We do not allude to the common, slipshod and imperfect way in which these supplies are obtained; that is, by means of late and stunted vegetables in a weedy and unmanured garden, or fruit of a doubtful character, on neglected, moss-grown, unpruned trees, and every thing else of a similar style of production. These cannot be called luxuries, and even the inhabitant of dense cities, whose ses only brick walls, and one small patch of clear sky just overhead, may get much better at the nearest market, on the corner of the next street. What we allude to, are articles of much higher perfection—the best early vegetables from the hot bed; the most delicious raised in the open garden; fruits of the most improved varieties, under the best cultivation, and comprising the whole yearly circle, from the earliest strawberries and cherries, through the profusion of sorts that ripen in summer and autumn to the finest long keeping apples and pears. Every one, almost, has plenty of fruit during a certain brief period in autumn, and some have a partial or occasional supply through a large portion of the year; but very few are able to place a fine dish of the best upon their tables for every day of the year. The animals of the farm contribute their share; "the flowing cup, fresh from the dairy virgin's liberal hand," as Armstrong expresses it; real genuine cream for the strawberries, and not the market mixture of chalk and milk; a fowl for the table, when needed, and plenty of fresh eggs from the poultry house at all times; these all contribute much to the comfort of country life. But these are not all; the neat residence, the well kept ornamental grounds, the well furnished rooms, the intellectual food of books and papers, all have a large share in making up the complete whole.

But while the country resident is providing for his own convenience, he should not forget the comfort of his domestic animals. It is always gratifying to see the same complete system of convenience in a farmery, as in the most perfect and best kept family residence. Warm, well ventilated, well littered stables, thoroughly cleaned at least twice, but better three times a day, are not so rare as ample provision for the smaller animals. All animals are most liable to disease, and most subject to a loss of flesh, when suffering from any kind of dishonesty in, among the most prominent of which are badly cleaned floors and an impure atmosphere.—Good milk is not to be expected, nor good butter to be made from cows suffering under these unfavorable influences. A very rare thing is a clean, inoffensive piggery. Every pig-house should have a smooth, hard floor, so as to be constantly scraped and swept, by the easiest possible removal of the accumulations. When several inches of peat or turf are deposited, for them to root and burrow in, (when the weather is not freezing,) this should never be allowed to remain long enough to create an unpleasant odor, and a hard floor will contribute much towards its easy removal. How much better would be such special provision as this, than the more common practice of allowing swine to roam the barn yard among cattle, seeking shelter and cleanliness, but finding none. Fowls are very sensitive to cold and discomfort. We have examined many well made poultry-houses, but scarcely one kept constantly sweet and clean. It costs but little more to remove a peck of hen-guano, in light semi-daily instalments, than at one weekly and disagreeable operation. Sheep would grow and thrive, and survive our winters enough better to pay for artificial shelter in a year or two, if comfortable sheds and dry yards were provided for them, and sufficient divisions made for keeping the various classes of weak and strong young and old separate.

Complete range of buildings, and ample provision for all these purposes should be regarded as a fine picture to every good farmer and of the best implements also, as equally ornamental to his grounds. Some cogent reasons would be found for the shelter so prized for these. Carts, wagons, and ploughs, mauls, hoes, and forks, pitchforks, cradles, and drills, should as much have special rooms provided for them, in which they should be kept when not in use, as the fa

There is another room of a different character, which should never be omitted on any farm of considerable size, but of which nearly every one is entirely destitute. This is a business office, attached to the dwelling, where the account books are kept, where hired men are settled with and paid, where bargains are made with business men, and all consultations of a business character are held. Such a room need not be more than ten or twelve feet square, and may be of very simple construction, warmed by a small stove, and not consuming a cord of wood a year. If the farmer does not himself see the advantages of such an office, every neat house-wife most certainly will, who is so often annoyed by such transactions in those singularly appropriate places, the parlor, or around the kitchen cook-stove.

We might add to the list of country conveniences, good, well gravelled farm roads; well paved or flagged barn-yards; and self-shutting and self-fastening gates for the different fields.

A WRETCHED DEATH.

Many of our readers remember the late George W. Gill, familiarly known as "Wash Gill," for many years connected with the theatrical profession in this city. All that is mortal of him now rests in Baltimore Cemetery. As a fair index of his character, the inscription on the stone, "Alas, poor Yorick!" is truly appropriate. He was really "a fellow of infinite jest and humor"—and with geniality he had qualities of mind and heart which sufficed to gain for him the good opinion and respect of all with whom he associated, either professionally or in the private walks of life. In early manhood he married a fair and lovely girl, to whom he was sincerely attached. No young man was ever more happy than he in the outset of life. For a while no cloud dimmed the bright horizon of his happiness.—But at last the tempter came. The licensed dealers in liquid damnation were not to be deprived of victims, and in time the fair lovely wife became a bloated, disfigured, obese, drunken brawler. Poor Wash loved convivial company, and awoke too late to the horrid condition of his wife. Threats and persuasions were equally ineffective—for from drunkenness she sank still lower, and he broken-hearted, disgraced and emaciated by her shame and degradation, and his unavailing regrets, sank into an early grave. For a year before he died he was supported by kind and good friends, and his children were secured from a mother lost to shame and virtue.

But the finale, the winding up of the domestic drama, is yet to come.

Poor Gill is buried, "he sleeps his last sleep," but he died in peace with God and man. The wreck of his once lovely and joyous bride frequently became a burthen on the police. She sank still lower in infamy, until Thursday night, in a miserable house, suffering from a long debauch, in the agonies of remorse, she put an end to her own existence by opium or laudanum, and when the woman with whom she slept awoke from her inebriated slumbers she found a cold corpse by her side. Yesterday she was buried.—The sexton was the only mourner, and at this moment her own children little dream of their mother's fate. They are left fortunately in good hands, the only relics of a once happy home, which was thus despoiled by rum.—Balt. Clipper.

EXTRAORDINARY DISCOVERY.

Exhuming of a Human Body in a Petrified State.—Yesterday afternoon, as some workmen were excavating a cellar on Linton street, a short distance below John street, they came in contact with a hard substance about 9 feet below the grade of the street, which, after some trouble, was excavated and brought to light, and proved to be a human body in a perfect state of petrification! This extraordinary specimen of the human race is a male, about five feet seven inches in length. The hair is cut very short, and seems to have been shaved in several parts, as its formation is perfect and apparently uninjured by time. The face is singularly formed, and differing in shape and expression from any of the races of the present age. What is more remarkable the body is perfect in all its parts, every muscle, fibre, and sinew being perfectly developed. The color is rather of a light gray, and in some parts, approaches very near to the white man, although this may have been produced by the action of the soil in which it has been buried, perhaps for ages.

A number of eminent scientific gentlemen visited this remarkable and strange exhumation yesterday afternoon, but nothing of a definite character was arrived at relative to the cause, or what length of time it had lain there, although all agreed that several hundred years must have elapsed since it was buried.—Cincinnati Enquirer, April 1.

Decidedly Cool.—A very cool answer from a Sophomore is faithfully recorded among the memories of our college days. Professor —— had just delivered some sound lecture that it was nearly 2 o'clock, and high time the interior of the house was dedicated to Bacchus. Upon this point the Professor was peculiarly sensitive.

One day a chestnut, propelled by some invisible hand, bounded across the room, and came evidently in contact with the learned gentleman's bald pate, that glanced off, it spun almost up to the ceiling.

"Mr. I——," thundered out the Professor, "that was you, sir—I know it, sir; I'll dock it, sir, from your class—I say I will, sir."

"Do you think that I should have tried to hit the student?"

"I don't know, sir," replied Mr. I——, "I think from the reflection of his spectacles you looked at him once or twice."

RESIGNATION.

I have sent hopes out on the Future's sea
That have not all returned. Some have come back
Sad split and leaky like storm-stricken ships;
And some have fallen in their middle flight,
Like weak-winged birds. My heart says—"It is well."

O, 'tis a joy, the very top of joy!
When one throws off the mantle of the world
And dons the white, unfading robe of faith.
Thus 'twas with one I loved as mine own soul,
God sent his herald, Death, to summon him;
Murmuring not, and clad in hope he went
With a complacent soul. He said to me:—
"My hopes of earth are dim as morning stars,
Melting like rainbows in a twilight sky;
Pride has gone down within me, like a sun
That sinketh in the sea. But as the moon
Wakes from her trance at eve, and calmly leaves
The dewy hill-top for a higher throne,
Mounting the sky in her monastic veils,
Like some pure nun renouncing all the world,—
So has my heart in sorrow's night gone up,
As that white moon to God."

I have a song that he was wont to sing
Of winter nights, a sweet wild flower from
The garden of his heart, and pure as is
A dew drop in the sun. The day he died,
He dreamy-sat beside the tiled hearth,
And sang it to a plaintive melody;
While dropped from heaven leisurely the snow
And covered up the foot prints of the leaves.
The wind went rushing like a madman by,
And hallooed down the flue. He heard it not;
He was in dream land lost; his angel soul
Was pluming for immortal flight.

He that sprinkles earth with flowers,
Crowns the wood with wreaths of snow,
Tempers rough-voiced winds until they whisper sweet,
melodious, low,
Bids the sunbeams shine thro' showers,—
It is He that sends us wo.

Woes are angels in disguise,
Speaking to the soul within,
Bidding us look up meek-eyedly from our starless night of sin,
Holding to us noblest prizes
For the Christ-touched heart to win.

I've a joy, a tender sorrow,
Nestled in my bosom's core;
And I prize it as a truer prizes precious yellow ore;
I'd not barter it to-morrow
For the wealthy ocean's store.

It was sent me straight from heaven!
Though my eyes it tears do swim,
I would keep it, fondly keep it, till I give it back to Him—
Him who hangs the stars at even
Out to glimmer and grow dim.

STANZAS FOR THE SENTIMENTAL.

On a Tear which Angelina observed trickling down my Nose at dinner time.]

Nay, fond one! I will ne'er reveal
Wherce flowed that sudden tear;
The truth 'twere kindness to conceal
From thy too anxious ear.

How often when some hidden spring
Of recollected grief
Is rudely touched, a tear will bring
The bursting breast relief!

Yet 'twas no anguish of the soul,
No memory of woes,
Bade that one lonely tearlet roll
Adown my chiseled nose:

But, ah! interrogation's mute
Still twinkles in thine eye;
Know then that I have burnt my throat
With this green apple pie!

Ho for South Troy and Eagle Mills.

A MINE OF WEALTH—

A little more help and its riches shall be dove tayed to the astonishment of the world and to the enrichment of the South.

THE proprietors of Eagle Mills and South Troy, (the most important real estate in the South, and comprising water powers of inestimable value,) nothing daunted by a degree of public neglect, are pushing forward. Their motto is, "ONWARD! ONWARD!"—and so far, their labors have been handsomely rewarded. $4,000, clean cash, in eleven months, is not to be sneezed at. And if this sum can be realized by a limited investment of capital, what could not be done by a liberal and full handed company? And will not money men give their attention to this locality and its great inducements for the investment of capital? Its intrinsic and prospective value has been estimated at $2,700,000!!! Very comfortable sum, that; and ought me, the subscriber thinks, to be deemed worthy attention of millionaires. At one time it was within the reach of men of small means—those who boast of then 20, 30, and 50 thousand dollars. They must be satisfied, now, with simply seeing the land of promise. They are invited to come and take a look; and perhaps they may be gratified with a brief talk about trading for interests. Be liberal men, with handsome means, are those who will receive greatest attention. Come forward gentlemen, here is the place for your money, and the place that will repay you double for every dollar expended.—$4,000 a year for 25 years, are $100,000—clear—over and above expenses. Money will make money. It strangely multiplies itself, and that very rapidly, when properly used. Will you come? Come if you will. If not, why, we'll guess as we have done: We'll do the best we can: We'll continue to improve this valuable property, slowly and surely. We'll introduce one thing after another until the ground is occupied. We will not only live by it, but make money. Post men who want work shall find here constant employment and good wages. No difficulty about it. Eagle Mills and South Troy are bound to go ahead, just as sure as the sun shines and that the rain falls to water the earth. The "southern country shall feel its benign influence, and rejoice in its prosperity, and when we have done with it, all men shall call us blessed"

ANDREW BAGGARLY.

January 19, 1854. 35

P. S. The location and other advantages of South Troy and Eagle Mills, properly understood and appreciated, would hardly fail of arresting the serious attention of the friends of the Western Rail Road extension. It is our intention to collect information on this subject, with a view of urging upon the public and the Legislature, the claims of this section; and have but little doubt that if facts of sufficient importance shall be adduced, South Troy and Eagle Mills, will be speedily connected with Salisbury by rail road as it ought to be, and thence with the markets of the world. To this end, a survey of the route between the two places shall be made in due time. South Troy will, ere long become a manufacturing city; and hence the necessity of increasing transporting and travelling facilities. The advantages of such a road would tell powerfully upon the merchandize and mechanical interests of Salisbury. Doctors, Lawyers and Divines, are also concerned, and would all be benefitted. A. B

A MOST ASTONISHING CURE OF SCROFULOUS ULCERS.—A CASE CERTIFIED BY THE MAYOR OF BOSTON, ENGLAND

Copy of a Letter from J. Noble, Esq., Mayor of Boston, Lincolnshire.

To Professor Holloway,

Dear Sir:—Mrs. Sarah Dixon, of Liquorpond Street, Boston, has this day deposed before me that for a most desirable period she was severely afflicted with Scrofulous Sores and Ulcers on her arms, feet, legs, and other parts of her body; and although the first medical advice was obtained, at the cost of a large sum of money, she obtained no abatement of suffering, but greatly grew worse.

Being recommended by a friend to try your Ointment, she procured a small pot, and a box of the Pills, and before that was all used, symptoms of amendment appeared. By persevering with the medicines for a short time longer, according to the directions, and strictly adhering to your rules as to diet, &c., she was perfectly cured, and now enjoys the best of health.

I remain, dear sir, yours truly,

(Signed) J. NOBLE.

Copy of a Letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Yeates, of the Post Office, Aldwick Road, near Bognor, Sussex, dated Jan. 15, 1853.

To Professor Holloway,

Sir—I suffered for a considerable period from a severe attack of Erysipelas, which at length settled in my leg, and resisted all medical treatment. My sufferings were very great, and I gave desponded of any permanent amendment, when I was advised to have recourse to your Ointment and Pills. I did so without delay, and am happy to say the result was eminently successful, for they effected a radical cure of my leg and restored me to the enjoyment of health. I shall ever speak with the utmost confidence of your medicines, and have recommended them to others in the neighborhood similarly afflicted, who derived equal benefit.

I am, sir, your obliged and faithful servant,

(Signed) ELIZABETH YEATES.

Extract from a letter from F. M. Cory, to H. L. Stewart, Esq. No. 157 Second street, New York.

SPARTA, June 30, 1849.

Dear friend Stewart:—I have been home now just two months. When I last saw you, I had but little hopes of ever getting any better. But I have now the pleasure of thanking you for recommending me to take Dr Rogers' Syrup of Liverwort, Tar and Canchalagua. I got a dozen bottles of it and took home with me, determined to make a fair trial of it, as I had done every thing else. I have only taken four bottles of it, and I must say it has done me more good than any other medicine I have ever taken. On my first taking it, it increased the expectoration, and I raised a great deal of bloody matter from my lungs. But that has now ceased, and so has my cough nearly. I cough but little now, and expect soon to be entirely free from it. I consider it an invaluable medicine, and shall recommend it to all who are afflicted with a Cough or Diseased Lungs.

* * * * * * *

I bet a young lady who had the Consumption, and had bled a good deal from the Lungs, and doctored several months with our Physician, but grew worse, have one bottle of it, and it cured her. It acted almost miraculously in her case.

Your sincere friend, F. M. CORY.

I read your advertisement, &c., and thought I would try Dr. Rogers' Syrup of Liverwort, Tar and Canchalagua. Before I had taken up the third bottle, my bleeding had stopped, my Cough was gone and I felt as well as usual. My health is now good. I consider it a most excellent medicine, and cordially recommend it to my friends. [This statement was made to the proprietors, March 12th, 1850.]

SHEEK'S CELEBRATED Wheat Threshers.

A. SHEEK AND BROTHERS,

ARE now prepared to fill all orders for their Celebrated Threshing Machines. Having made arrangements at the North for a very superior article of Castings, and having materials of every description necessary to make a Machine, selected with the greatest care. With the experience of A. Sheek, and that of our experience and perfect workmen, we feel assured that our Machines cannot be surpassed by any in this section of country, (the proof of which many have tested,) and a superior Machine we know not of any where, North, South, East or West—we make the cylinders of iron or wood as may be wished. We can furnish a Machine for two, four or six horses as may be desired. Our Machines are warranted to perform well.

As we are generally very much pressed near harvest, it would be well for persons wanting Machines to send their orders soon. Orders promptly attended to.
