

The subscriber being now engaged in an engagement and completion of his life and times of Henry Clay, finds on examination of Mr. Clay's papers and correspondence at Ashland, that his Private Correspondence is of material importance for a complete exhibition of his character and history, and of those portions of the history of the times with which he was connected. As Mr. Clay was not in the habit of taking copies of his own letters, they are now scattered over the country in the hands of his numerous correspondents, and have doubtless been preserved. No matter how private or even confidential the correspondence may have been, if not of a nature to render its publication improper, it is a very effective mode of illustrating character, and is often important in history. The subscriber therefore respectfully and earnestly requests all correspondents of Mr. Clay, whether in the earlier or latter periods of his life, in public or in private stations, who may be in possession of original letters from Mr. Clay on any subject whatever not sacred to privacy after death, that they will be pleased if not inconsistent with their feelings, to forward such letters to the publisher of the work, A. S. Barnes & Co., 51 John Street, New York; and they may be assured that they will be returned, or subject to their order, according to instructions that may be given.

The subscriber will also be greatly obliged for any communications relating to Mr. Clay that may be thought new and important; addressed to the care of A. S. Barnes & Co., as above mentioned. As the design is to publish the work in the coming spring, it will be seen that immediate attention to this request will be necessary to make it available.

The subscriber will be greatly obliged to all Editors of Newspapers who may take sufficient interest in this notice to give it circulation.

C. COLTON.
Ashland, Feb. 10th, 1854.

The blind old bard of Scotia's rocky side, and others of this nature; and the young men had rather more to say about the "Father of his Country," the "immortal Trio," the "preservation of the Constitution," and the "excellence of our Institutions," than was in strict accordance with taste; still we can readily pardon this, when we take into consideration the warm blood and enthusiastic patriotism of youth—especially in the South—and the fact that their speeches would have quite a different tone, taken as a whole upon the stage, and taken singly, each to its respective author in his own room.

The orators were encouraged by the many gifts of Flora, showered down upon them.

The College Band also contributed much to the pleasures of the occasion by their enraptured strains. They united the substantial thanks of their mates and the community, which it is intended shall be manifested in due time.

The marshals conducted themselves with the greatest propriety, and succeeded in preserving unexceptionable order. The whole concern ended amicably, and at its close, the president of the University expressed his satisfaction by saying that he recollects no former Senior Speaking since his connection with the Institution, which would compare with it, taking the speeches as a whole, although single instances might. It is to be hoped, that the coming commencement will be proportionably good. I think it will, judging from the preparations making for the annual Ball and other indications. A STUDENT.

A CALAMITOUS FIRE.
The falling of the walls of a large building in New York, which was destroyed by fire on Tuesday night, caused a greater loss of life than was reported in our telegraphic account of it. The fire having commenced in the fifth story of the building, upon which several engines were playing without much effect, the members of another company were directed to get a stream up the second story stairway. In carrying out this order, they had barely got into the second story when the rear wall fell outward on the roof of a temporary building, constructed as an extension to the store on the first floor, with a dreadful crash, carrying that and the entire inside of the building with it to the first story, and burying beneath the ruins nearly all who chanced to be inside of the walls. As soon as this crash was over a large number of firemen rushed to the basement of the building in order to aid their associates. But as soon as they got fairly within the walls, the side walls came down, carrying with them the first floor the ruins of the former crash, and those persons lying beneath them. So sudden and unexpected was the last fall of walls that all those who had made a rush to the assistance of their companions were buried beneath the entire mass. The firemen and police immediately rushed to the rescue of the unfortunate sufferers, the cries of some of whom could be heard and bodies of several of them seen from the rear of the building; but the raging of the fire and the danger of crushing those who were still alive by the removal of heavy timbers prolonged the extraction of some of them for several hours. The last man recovered alive was not retrieved until after eight hours suffering, at a depth of fifteen feet beneath the ruins, where he was surrounded by four or five dead bodies. He was conscious all the time, and communicated directions to those engaged in his rescue, but he only lived a few hours afterwards. Fourteen in all were killed, and upwards of twenty badly injured—a lamentable sacrifice to a criminal but too frequent economy in the construction of buildings.

The names of the killed are: James McNulty, William J. Diegan, John A. Keyser, Alexander McKay, Daniel McKay, Dewitt L. Alston, George Reinhardt, Andrew P. Schenck, Michael C. C. Finn, John P. O'Connell, Wilson, Niemann, and two bodies unrecognised.

The City Councils made a liberal appropriation for their burial, passed resolutions of sympathy with their friends and relatives, and appointed a committee to participate with the firemen in making suitable arrangements for their obsequies.
