

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Articles for this column must be dropped in the Post Office, addressed to "A. W. M."—Box 86.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

You see I'm but a little chap,
Bout three feet high or so,
But look! I've got my trousers on,
And I intend to grow.

The Ocean vast is made of drops,
The Earth is made of grains,
I mean to study and be great,
My head is full of brains.

CALBOUY was once a little boy,
Upon his mother's knee,
I guess he too was often snatched
About his A B C.

And so I firmly am resolved,
With all my might to try
Not only to be great, but good
And so kind folks—Good bye!

For the Children's Column.

"Father is drinking so and behaving so badly that I have to go home." So said a harmless, beautiful little girl to me as I met her near the church door one Sabbath morning. Her love for the Sunday School had called her to her accustomed seat when the bell rang, but her fear for her feeble mother troubled her little heart, and she could not remain satisfied. Why would that father forbid his dear daughter from enjoying the same pleasant privileges that other little children were enjoying? And there was a painful sorrow shadowing her young face, and an expression of mingled shame and sadness in her sweet blue eye. Why would that father veil her gentle features in gloom and dim that eye's innocent lustre? Her step was measured and sad—her very carriage revealing the trouble that sat upon her spirit. Oh! why should that father by his wickedness forbid his child to trip as lightly and as cheerily as other children in town? Does he not love his children as well as other parents love theirs? But her sadness and trouble as well other words she spoke to us, told of the sadness and trouble that was blighting the hopes and breaking the heart of another—that other, her own dear mother. Alas! and is it true, that a man can become so debased, so ruined as to love the bottle better than he loves the bright-faced children whom God has given him? Is there more beauty to him in the sparkling glass than there is in the chubby cheeks and laughing eyes of the tender babe that just begins to so sweetly lip the name of Father? Is it possible that he will break his dear wife's heart rather than break the cursed cup that is kindling the fires of hell in his soul? A drunken father!—a drunken husband! A man, a father, and a drunkard? A man a husband, and yet a drunkard? "Tis strange—'tis passing strange—'tis wondrous pitiful." Yet such there are in this community. To their children let the world be kind and merciful, for they are most sadly unfortunate. He to whom they look with love and hope as their kindest earthly protector, is so hard-hearted that he curses them with the shame and pain and dread calamity of a drunken father. Great God! where is the love of the parent's heart that will so awfully curse his own offspring for the sake of whiskey? Where is the reason of the parent's and husband's mind, that will murder the peace and happiness and prospects of his own children—with the cheek and bleed and break the heart of his trusting companion, and sink his own soul into misery and destruction, for the sake of whiskey!

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

Jesus is the life of a believer's hope here and the hope of his life hereafter.
We must be raised from the death of sin, before we can be raised to a life of glory.

It is good to have God dwell with us; but it will be far better when we dwell with God.

It matters but little who speaks ill of us in our day, if we but know that God will speak well of us in the last day.

The Saviour brings love in his heart, power in his arm, and pardon in his hand.

Our greatest glory consists not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall.

It appeared odious when our first parents were driven out of paradise, when the old world was destroyed, and when the cities of the plain were consumed; but in the cross of Christ it is exceedingly sinful. There while Divine love appears in its brightest form, human depravity assumes its deepest dye.

What a beautiful ornament is humility! It has been represented as the string that binds together all the precious pearls of the Christian graces, and if it break they are all scattered.

The man that lives forgetful of God, is in an awful sense without him,—a practical Atheist. He may startle at the charge, but it is true.

Guard against pride as a thing unbecoming your character; a disgrace to your profession, a dishonor to your Saviour, a badge of Satan's livery, a fruit of the flesh, and contrary to the Spirit.

LINES

In memory of Willie Lester Aldrich.

How oft with fond embrace, Willie,
I've pressed thee to my breast;
And watched thy smiling face, Willie,
And felt supremely blest!

Now, many a silent tear, Willie,
In loneliness I shed;
My heart has lost its cheer, Willie,
Since thou art with the dead.

But though my tears may stream, Willie,
They're doomed to stream in vain;
Thy smile shall never beam, Willie,
To gladden me again.

But while thy prattling tongue, Willie,
Is hushed on earth forever,
It sings the Sacred Song, Willie,
Beyond the mystic River.

Upon thy shining brow, Willie,
There gleams a crown of gold,
And thou art happy now, Willie,
With happiness untold.

And oh! how passing sweet, Willie,
The hope by Mercy given,
That we again may meet, Willie,
And dwell for aye in Heaven!

A NEW COUNTERFEIT.

The Augusta Chronicle, of Sunday, says: Another counterfeit Confederate note was exhibited to us yesterday morning. It is of the ten dollar issue of September 2, 1861, printed in colors. The principal distinguishing mark is the filling up of the red oblong in the lower centre of the note. In the genuine, the filling up consists of the word "ten" in small letters frequently repeated—in the counterfeit it is merely dots. The counterfeit has the words "Adrian Sharp, &c.," on the lower left hand corner, not on the genuine. The red color of the counterfeit is paler than the genuine, the engraving is coarser, apparently on wood, while the genuine is a well finished steel plate.

We learn that several persons have been arrested in Atlanta upon the suspicion of being concerned in the circulation of counterfeit notes. The Confederacy has the following in relation to their examination:

TROOP ANAZERS.—They are quite numerous—something over a dozen persons having been taken into custody. We hear that the developments are quite startling in their character. We consider it our duty in the present stage of the investigations to give no particulars of what we hear. We will also say that we do not officially or certainly know the nature of the charges or what has been developed. A board of officers are making the investigations and everything connected with the affair is very properly withheld from the public.

The scoundrels attached to Pope's army, burnt the beautiful hotel and all the surrounding buildings, at the Fauquier White Sulphur Springs, near Warrenton, before running from that place. These buildings were very spacious, and built in superb style.

A Large Hoard.—On Tuesday last the Receiver at Savannah, Geo., sold requisited bank and railroad stocks of alien countries to the large amount of $418,640, which amount goes into the Confederate Treasury.
