

MISCELLANEOUS.

SWEET HOME.—A Parody.

By the Rev. John N. Muffit.

This world with its glory, and all we hold dear,
Now shining in beauty, must soon disappear;
But a moment they glitter, then fade to the eye,
Like meteors of night, that flash o'er the sky.
Home—home—sweet, sweet home!
There's no place like home!
Tho' pleasure's rich clusters now temptingly glow,
In the frost of the grave no flowers shall grow;
And homes that we love deserted become,
And fond ones we cherish'd, shall sleep in the tomb.
Home—home—sweet, sweet home!
There's no place like home!
Then give me a home, far up in the skies,
Where hope never withers—where love never dies;
The home of the Christian, where pilgrims are blest,
And the exiles of earth forever shall rest.
Home—home—sweet, sweet home!
There's no place like home!

ADDRESS TO MY NOSE.

What leads me on where'er I go,
In sun and shade, and joy and wo,
'Tis fog and tempest, rain and snow?
My Nose.
In youth's most ardent reckless day,
And when arose disputes at play,
What would be foremost in the fray?
My Nose.
And should my tongue rude blows provoke
What would protrude & brave each stroke
Till coral streams its pains bespoke?
My Nose.
And falling in each airy bound,
In chase of some new charm or sound,
To save me what came first to ground?
My Nose.
When some dark pass I would explore,
With neither shut nor open door,
What oit for me bad usage bore?
My Nose.
And when in want I learned to eat,
And hunger might my judgment cheat,
What prompted me to food most sweet?
My Nose.
Mid violet banks and woodbine bowers,
And woods ere bloom'd the fairest flowers,
What fed me with their fragrant powers?
My Nose.
Each eye may need in age a guide,
And when young helpmates I provide,
Thy back thou'lt lend me for to stride,
My Nose.
And can I e'er in care or glee,
Refuse my aid or love to thee,
Who thus has felt and bled for me?
My Nose.
No: when cold winter's winds blow high,
And bite thee hard and thee shall cry,
Thy tears with sympathy I'll dry,
My Nose.
And if for snuff thy love shall come,
Thy slaves my finger and my thumb,
Shall faithful be and bear thee some,
My Nose.
Still, as I follow thee along,
Oh! may'st thou never lead me wrong,
But thou must hush our sleeping song,
My Nose.

Manufactories.—In a speech lately delivered in Providence, Rhode Island, the very strong hold of cotton mills, a lamentable picture is drawn of the fate of the operatives in those establishments. It is there stated, that children of a very tender age are shut up from the common blessings of air and exercise, for fourteen hours in the day, with the exception of twenty or thirty minutes that are allowed twice a day for meals, and are otherwise inhumanly treated. But, Sir, continues the Orator:

"We would presume to advise the Hon. Senator from Kentucky to travel in cog. when he visits Cotton mills. He can then see, in many of the prisons of that name in New England, instead of rosy cheeks, the pale the sickly, the haggard countenance of the ragged child from 6 to 12 years of age. Haggard from the worse than slavish confinement in the Cotton mill. He may see that child driven up to the "clock work" by the cowskin in some cases. He might see in some instances the child taken from the bed at four in the morning, and plunged into the cold water to drive away his slumbers and prepare him for the labors of the mill. And he might see that child robbed of a part of his thirty minutes allowed for his breakfast and dinner, that scanty portion, (one hour for two meals) must a part of it, be wrested from him by placing the hands of the clock behind the true time at night, and before the true time morning and noon, after the child has gone out of the mill to his breakfast and dinner.

"The Hon. Gentleman might see about 5000 children in Rhode Island, almost one half of the whole number of the State, deprived in a great measure, of the means to learn even the first rudiments of education. We could point out to him many of all ages, from six to thirty years, who can neither read nor write. We can show him females who have had corporeal punishment inflicted on them. Yes, Sir, who have had a board split over their heads by a heartless monster, in the shape of an overseer of a Cotton Mill Paradise."

Can there exist a more intolerable slavery than this? Had the picture been drawn at a distance from the place at which this cruelty is practised, and where the means of detecting misrepresentation were not so immediately at hand, we would not have given credit to it. We knew that in the crowded prisons of the same kind in Europe such a state of things did exist: there we have witnessed scenes of cruelty, in comparison with which most of the evils of Southern slavery are tender mercies; but that they should be permitted in Republican America, where the means of subsistence are so easily obtained, and the opportunities for healthful labor and necessary liberty are so varied and accessible, seems altogether unaccountable.

Dow, the Preacher.—Lorenzo, the Cosmopolite, after an interval according to his own statement, of about twenty years, again visited this town on Saturday last, and twice addressed the multitude, as he is in the habit of calling his auditors. He is but little changed in appearance, and his manner of speaking just as it was. We are informed that in one of his discourses, he spoke of the seven vials of God's wrath poured out upon a sinful world, one of which was young Napoleon, who in less than eighteen months, he predicted, would be seated on the throne of France, thence, like another Attila, scourging the nations: But if the last news from Europe is to be relied upon, the prophecy will be falsified by the death of the "Son of the Man," (said to be dangerously ill,) ere his warlike career has a beginning; or the vaticinations of Lorenzo can be much farther promulgated.—Petersburg Times.

A fanatic, dressed in flowing silk camblet, and wearing a beard half a yard long, is denouncing the wickedness of New York, in the streets of that city. He declares it is to be destroyed this year.

Atrocious Murder.—A late Kentucky paper gives some circumstances connected with one of the most atrocious cases of murder that has ever come under our observation. Mr. Andrew Young and his wife, residing within about a mile and a half of Mount Sterling, were murdered by one of their negroes on Sunday last. The negro, about 19 years of age, was threatened by his mistress with a whipping. At this time the greater part of the family were absent, the daughters being at meeting, and Mr. Young himself in the orchard, some short distance from the house. Mrs. Young being in the garden, the negro came upon her with an axe, knocked her down, by repeated blows despatched her, and consummated the deed by separating her head from her body! He then went to the orchard and concealing himself behind an apple tree, watched his opportunity, and springing out on Mr. Young as he passed, succeeded in knocking him down with the axe and then murdered him. After these deeds were done, far from attempting his escape, he told his younger brother to go to the meeting house and inform the ladies of what had happened. The brother spread the alarm on his way—the negro was secured, and committed to Mount Sterling jail. Mr. Young was upwards of sixty years of age, and Mrs. Young about fifty.

Juries.—The law for starving juries has been abolished in Georgia. The law now provides, that where a jury is kept together any length of time, without being able to agree, they may supply themselves with provision and fire.

Singular.—We learn from good authority that about an acre and a half of land on the eastern shore, in Dutchess county, (New York,) about 3 miles up the river from Newburgh, has fallen nearly one hundred feet from its original level, so that the tops of the highest trees now standing on the fallen tract, are only even with the surface of the surrounding land. We can think of no reasonable way of accounting for this singular phenomenon, unless it is found that a stream of water which we learn runs into the river in that vicinity, has been gradually undermining for years, and the foundation having washed away, the whole mass has fallen.—Newburgh Tel.

Extraordinary Circumstance. On the 1st ult. a man and woman of genteel appearance put up at a boarding house in New York, having with them a child about six weeks old. After remaining a few days they walked out, apparently on business, leaving the child. Delay in returning excited suspicion, and on opening a box of theirs $1 50 and a note requesting that the family should take good care of the child—that money would be forwarded by mail to pay expenses; and should it be necessary to hear from the supposed father and mother, they should write to —, Zanesville, Ohio.

Shoemaking by machinery. It is not generally known, but we understand it to be an absolute fact, that Shoes are manufactured in Detford, England, by machinery; and that the government refuses to permit its being further used on account of its throwing the great body of persons belonging to that business out of employment. This makes forty kinds of business in which machinery has been introduced. England finds it necessary to check machinery. London paper.

Dr. Fisher informs us that Mr. Arthur Hort, died on the 4th inst. in consequence of the bite of a tick, or of its head having been left in the flesh. The tick fastened on his side, from which mortification was communicated to the bowels. Cambridge Chron.

A pint of varnish mixed with a bucket of whitewash, it is said, will give it in a great degree the qualities of paint—and that it will withstand all kinds of weather.

Shocco Springs.

THE Subscriber respectfully informs the Public, that her houses will be prepared for the reception of visitors—
