THE OLIO. Variety's the spice of life, That gives it all its flavor.

A Pathetic Ballad. Now pray X Q's this humble lay, 1 CI can't X L; But I shall all my powers S A. A story for to tell. In olden time a farmer dwelt, Before the river D, But R the pangs of love he felt, 4 sweet L I's R V.

His cottage clad in I V greep, He view'd with heart L S; And O, he cried, my lovely queen, Come share my happy state.

Our hero was but 4 T 2, L. I's R 8 T 3,

But C what wonders love can do, Her age he did not C.

With N R G he pressed his suit, He loved her to X S;

Alas! poor C's R's tongue was mute, At her E's E address.

Now C's to T's me with your suit, But pray you now R I's;

I love a handsome man, U brute, Who is in the X I's.

Said C's R, U R a cruel maid, To love my N M E;

If this is how my love's repaid, I'll lay me down and dic.

Said she I 4 C how 'twill be, Base N V fills thy heart; Now quickly from my presence flee,

And try to heal thy smart. Poor C's R hastened to his cot,

Look'd at his rams and U's; And then an L of rope he got, And tied a deadly noose.

Next minute in the air he swung, And sure relief he found; The little birds about him sung,

And P N's strut around. But now in the cold grave E lies, And sweet P's near it bloom; I must leave off-so wipe your I's,

And visit C's R's tomb.

Oh! thou'rt a ministering angel when To a poor lonely one; And sure man's life without thee, then A world without a sun!

At fifteen-Affect vivacity, and line your bonnet with pink. In the company of the man you would like for your husband, hold your breath long enough to blush; when he speaks to you, incline your eyes downwards in giving an answer. Be cautions at this age to wear gowns made high in the neck, that your charms may be conceived the greater.

At sixteen-Seem to have a high spirit, with the most unbounded submission to the opinion of the favored one. You may now look, when in conversation in the gentleman's face; but be cautious that the eye-brows are kept well arched. Affect a great fondness for little babies, and get the credit of being a good nurse.

At seventeen-Read the news of literature and fashion, and form your opinion of the follies of the day upon what you hear from observe and know yourself. Keep the works of Byron, Scott, Bulwer, James, and other popular authors, lying on your table, to induce a belief that you have them all at your tongue's end, and that you keep pace with the literati of the age. It is pleasant to hear ready discussions about the beauties and virtues to be found in such character as Flora McIvor, Rowena, Rebecca, Julia Mannering, May Dacre, &c. &c. -Read "Cookery made Easy," and "Heloise and Abelard," in secret.
