In the first primary Hines led the ticket with 990; Wilkins next with 780 and Kiser third with 485. Each candidate evidently received almost half of the available Kiser vote.

Better Library Facilities For Polk County

Better public library service for Polk County's 11,874 residents was the object of a visit last Friday from the Field Worker of the North Carolina Library Commission, who discussed the matter with interested groups and individuals in Saluda, Columbus, Mill Spring, and Tryon. At the present time there is no publicly supported public library in the county, in contrast to most of the other counties in the State.

The 1941 General Assembly voted $100,000 for each year of the biennium 1941-43, for State Aid for Public Libraries. During the first 10 months of the administration of this fund, 76 of the State's 100 counties worked out plans for receiving their share of this money. As a direct result of this stimulating fund, many new county-wide libraries have been organized, and many new bookmobiles are providing good books in rural areas formerly without such service. Already, 1,000,000 more North Carolinians have access to free public library facilities, than was the case a year ago.

Unfortunately, Polk County did not receive any of this State Aid fund during 1941-42, since no county appropriation was made, and no plan for service was worked out, in spite of requests that this be done. Chief requirements for sharing in the fund are: 1) Local interest as evidenced by local (county) appropriation; 2) A plan for serving rural areas of the county as well as urban centers; 3) Trained supervision of the program.
