South Africa The Land Where Everyone Is In Jail

South Africa, the most segregated country in the world is again making her usual noises at the United Nations where the racist country is fighting to keep her seat in the world assembly. By now, the racist regime in South Africa should be use to isolation. South Africa was expelled from the British Commonwealth long ago. The reason for that expulsion was because the regime in South Africa practices race segregation that is worse than being in jail. Black people in South Africa do not have the vote, must carry pass to be allowed into the cities and must leave the cities by or before six p.m.

Black people must ride at the back of the buses, must seat separately in public places and must not dine in restaurant with white people. In short, all the black people in South Africa are in an open prison.

Majority of United Nations member nations are demanding expulsion of the racist regime in South Africa from the UN. They say that the regime in South Africa has abused all human decency by the brutality of their repressive laws on the black people in South Africa. The regime in South Africa is expert in the use of large dogs to brutalize black people in that country. The regime is also an expert in passing repressive laws designed to degrade humanity by degrading all black people all over the world. To be educated in South Africa is to be vast in theories that show black people inferior to white people. Almost all the institutions in the South African regime is a vehicle of repression and suppression. What with the 90 day law which gives the police the power to arrest any black person and others (but mostly blacks) and imprison him to 90 days without reason. It is not uncommon in South Africa for the police to re-arrest the person at the end of the first 90 days for another 90 days imprisonment.

The population of the racist state of South Africa is 22 million and black people are 18 million yet the black people in that country do not have the vote and do not own property in the cities. What black people do in South Africa is to work in the mines (mainly gold mines that are plentiful in that country).

The black country of South Africa is forcefully ruled by white racists who see black people as servants and brutes who must only work at menial jobs.

Since it takes slaves to be a slavemaster and since nobody will be contented to be slave for long, many people believe that the days will come when black people in South Africa will no longer be slaves for the racist regime. The land which rightfully belongs to the black people in that country will one day be given back to the black people.

There are many other reasons for hope in South Africa. Even though it is a crime of the highest order in South Africa for a black person and a white person to associate, South Africa has the largest number of people of mix blood than any other place in the world. The reason is say to be because white South African men like black women. For some white South African men who cannot get it in South Africa, the clubs of neighboring African countries to South Africa are usually filled on weekends with South African white men on sex hunt. A visitor to South Africa is always struck by the tension and restlessness that fill the air of that racist country.

Because of the abundant gold and other minerals found in the African country of South Africa, that racist country is one of the richest countries in Africa. Yet that country is the only country in Africa that does not have TV station. The reasoning behind not having TV in the country is said to be that the racist regime feels that TV program might show blacks and whites together and that that will be breaking the law. Also in South Africa, the books that one can read are so few because almost all the good books are banned in that country. All books written by black Americans are banned in South Africa and any positive reference to black people is banned over the radio.

The attention of the world will be on South Africa in the very near future. The normalization of tension in the Middle East will probably leave the racist state of South Africa as one of the hottest race area of tension in Africa and it is hoped that the people of the world will unify their voices in protest about South Africa's inhumanity to man.

Rural Areas Need Transport

The pressing need for more transportation in rural areas was outlined by an A&T State University researcher last Saturday.

"For those who can afford and are capable of operating a car, transportation presents no serious problem," said

"However, for those who are poor and unable to afford an automobile or who are too young or too old to operate an automobile, public transportation is necessary."

Mrs. Johnson is a project director for the A&T Transportation Institute, a regional teaching and research center.

She presented her paper to the 15th annual meeting of the national Transportation Re-

"The development of effective public transportation systems is very important to the increased service delivery in the rural areas of America," said Mrs. Johnson. "The problems of comparatively lower economic, social, health and recreation advan-several instances to be directly related to mobility."

She said there is a need for more coordination of existing programs and for a new federal demonstration program.

Based on research in 12 rural transportation systems of the state, the paper was authored by Mrs. Johnson and her associates, Arthur Saltzman, Dr. Marion R. Blair, and Jon E. Burkhardt.
