

'Rapping'

by E.L. Clnorch

I got into a little trouble last week because someone thought they knew who I was talking about. I've heard that a "hurt dog" will always holler. And there was a lot of hollering last week.

Anyway, I was on my way over to the school to check on some inside information that had been given to me by an "inside source". But, I stopped off to check on a deal that me and an agent friend of mine had made some time before.

We had discussed a proposition that would have been would do my very best at the lowest cost possible. He agreed to either confirm the deal at a future date or let me know about it as soon as he discussed it with some of the people who would share the cost.

Well, you may have guessed it. Not only did he fail to contact me, but went and gave the job to "you-know-who". I was somewhat confused over the move, but decided to give the brother a chance to fulfill his part of our "gentlemanly agreement." When I went to see him, I got a better lesson in camouflage than when I was in combat training in the Army.

As soon as he saw me in the door he headed for the back room, studdering and stammering like a broken record. He was forcing conversation with people who, to say the least, were bewildered over his sudden loose tongue. He yakked and yakked, and I waited and waited.

Suddenly, like Flash Gordon, he darted for the outside door. Somewhat startled, I stook up quickly, ran after him and shouted, "Mr. Agent, will I be able to see you today?"

He cuffed his small chapped mouth, looked askew and said, "Yeah, yeah, I'll be right back." I took him for his word and waited some more.

Sure enough, he came back in ten minutes complaining of a theft. Well, that's what he said. A common theft that probably every car owner experiences from time to time. After a long discussion of his misfortune, he finally came over to me. Meek and shameful.

With sorrow and anguish written all over his face, he said "I'm sorry man. I went on and done it with "you-know-who". I didn't pursue the conversation any longer than necessary. He was obviously shaken by my appearance and flogging...I mean any further questioning on my part would have been like shooting a gnat with a cannon.

I only hope he learned from our little encounter. Not so much on how to get out of a bad fix, but that a man's word should be his bond.

WSSU Sponsor Program

Dr. William Sheppard, Director of Continuing Education, has announced that during the spring semester which begins in January, Winston-Salem State University will offer a course in the History of Science built around the thirteen week television series, "The Ascent of Man".

"The Ascent of Man" examines man's imaginative ability to create a better world. Among the topics covered are the interrelationship of science and the humanities; the influence of social and political developments on scientific discovery; and the effect of science and technology on the course of human events.

Class sessions will be conducted in the Enrichment Center on the WSSU campus and will consist of an hour lecture/discussion immediately prior to and following each television broadcast.

The course will be conducted by Dr. Howard Barnes, a historian, and Dr. B.S. Sidhu, a biologist. It will be entitled "History of Science" and will carry three semester hours of credit in either history of biology. Enrollment is open to matriculated students as well as to interested people in the community at large.

Our Daily Bread

By Evangelist Pat Cunningham

What is it God is saying as He speaks to us in His word? "Be not a hypocrite," He says to us. His greatest commandment is LOVE!!...Matt.. 22 chapter Matt 23 chapter people, let us always remember that God loves us. He died sincerely for us all. Let us serve Him with all our mind, heart, and soul. He is the only way to salvation and we "must" serve Him in spirit and truth. God bless for now.
