

Neal Appoints First Assistant

The Rev. Jeffrey O. Smith

The Rev. Jeffrey D. Smith, pastor of the United Presbyterian Churches at Pine Hall and Danbury, has been named administrative assistant to Congressman-elect Stephen L. Neal.

In that position, Smith will be in charge of Congressman

Salem.

"I look upon this new work as a ministry to the people of the Fifth District," Smith said.

Neal said he selected Smith from a long list of staff applicants because of his "exemplary qualifications, both educational and otherwise."

"I am delighted to obtain the services of a dedicated man like Jeff Smith, whose vast training and experience the people of the district.

Neal said several other persons will be added to the district staff and conveniently located office space will be leased.

Selective Buying Generates Jobs For Blacks

funds, however, OIC is mainly the creation of Rev. Sullivan.

Rev. Sullivan is a practical man who believes that Americans must work together to solve America's problem. For until the weak becomes strong, the strong cannot be great. Rev. Sullivan is a director in two Philadelphia banks and he is also the first black member of the board of General Motors Corp.

The Rev. Sullivan finds comfort in the ability of our nation to find solutions to needy problems. But he cautions that one problem creates another problem to be solved.

"Everything" the Rev. Sullivan said, "grew up by people deciding that there is a need to build an institution to solve the problem.

"To open up jobs for blacks something must be done such as selective buying by blacks on the industries and businesses that discriminate against blacks.

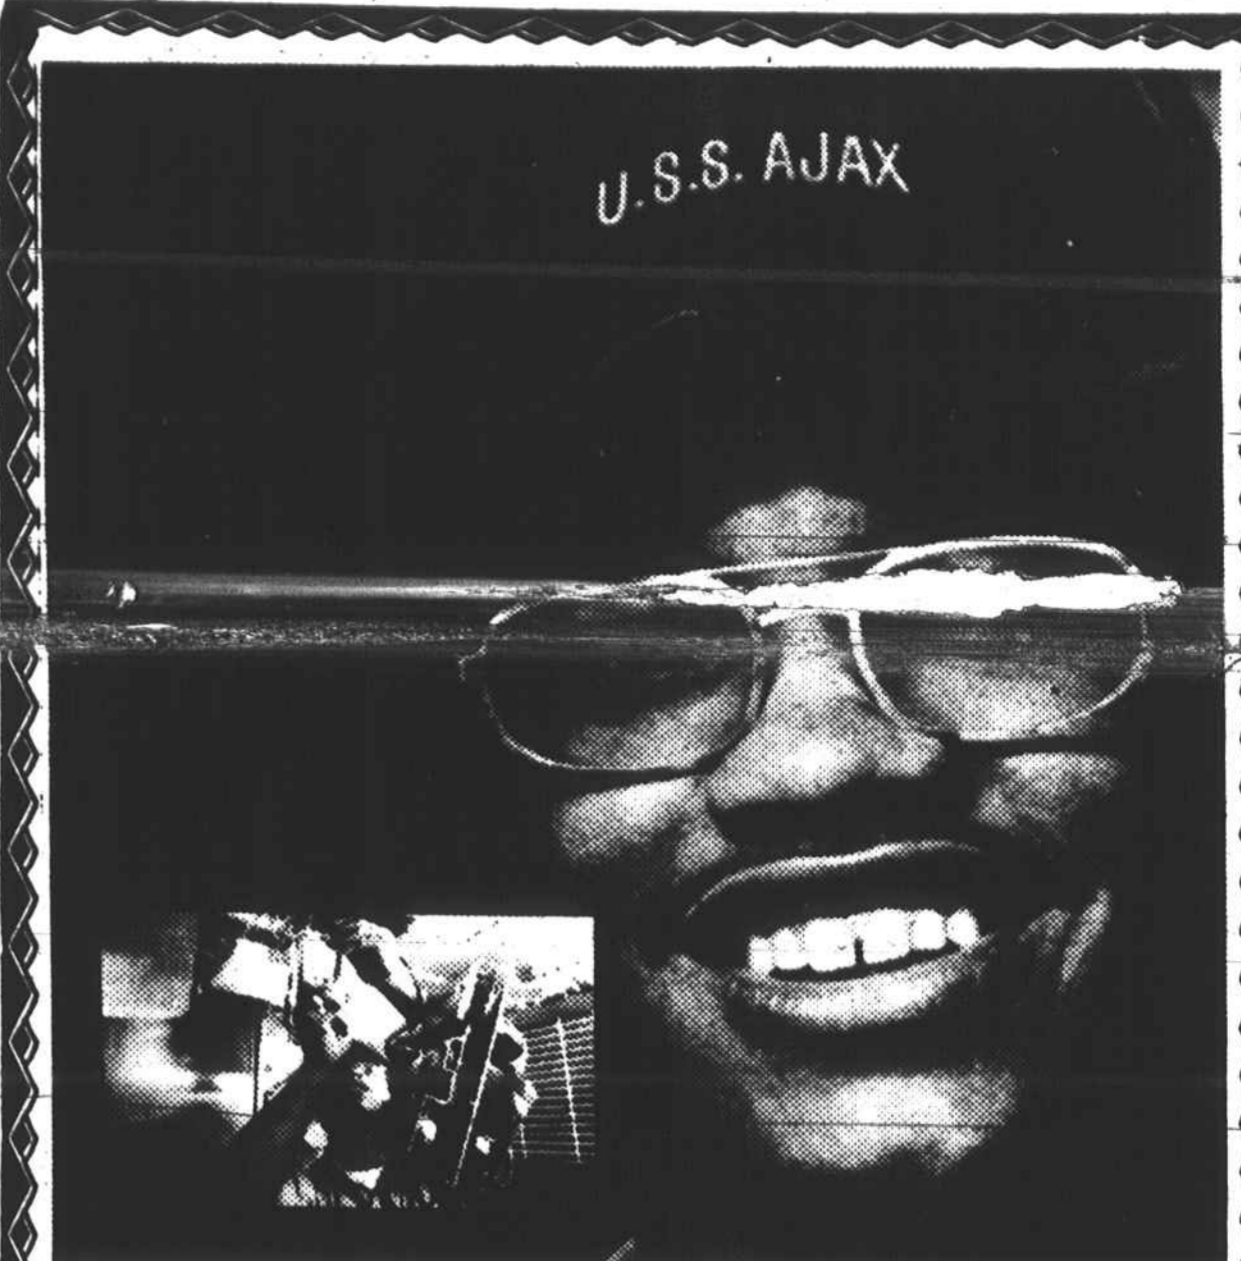

"Integration without preparation is frustration." These are some of the Rev. Sullivan's views in his long fights against discrimination. "To achieve his many objectives," he said he took part in many demonstrations. He soon found that most riots were mainly "engineered by those who are unemployed or have menial jobs." He founded OIC to give job training to the unskilled so that instead of rioting they will be involved in meaningful and rewarding employment.

"It did not matter," he said, "where you come from.

It is where you are going that counts." Where OIC is going is where all the minorities will be effectively trained to eliminate all riots and all wastes of human potentials.

Where North Carolina OIC Council hopes to reach is to establish a harmonious working relationship between the OIC Centers in North Carolina and to work with all groups promoting the cause of Human Dignity. The Council also hopes to make OIC Centers known throughout the state of North Carolina in order that the work of OIC will be recognized as a vital program of Manpower training.

For Frank...

A real future in sight.

Seaman Frank E. Hall is learning to be an Interior Communications Electrician.

Civilian specialists who do this kind of work include TV repairmen, electronics technicians, to name a few. If Frank Hall stays in the Navy, he's got a real solid future in sight. If he decides on a civilian career, he's already trained.

First, get your high school diploma. Then you'll have to study and work hard and live up to high Navy standards. It's worth it, though. Because we have some good things in store for you. Good training. Good pay. And a good lifestyle.

The opportunity is for real... and so are we. NAVY
