Sickle Cell Test Given

The disease orginated in Africa. Persons born with the disease were immuned against malaria. In America, however, the problem of malaria does not exist.

The sickle cell clinic was stationed at the Santa Claus house at Northside shopping center last Saturday in recognition of Health Education Week. A mobile unit was also stationed at the Shopping Center taking high blood pressures. Tables were set up on the Sundial program, mental health and the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

More than 25 persons took the sickle cell test on the first day at the center. Persons taking the test are suppose to receive letters within two weeks telling them the tests were either positive or negative.

If the test is positive the person is asked to come to Reynolds for counseling. The counseling services include a free visit with a doctor, urine test and all other lab tests the doctor feels are necessary. The rate of sickle cell is one out of 400.

The three staffers at the center travel to churches, schools, and industries and will be going to Central Prison in Raleigh soon. More than 10,000 persons were tested last year and before the contract year ends for the clinic another 10,000 will have to be tested.

As Scott said, finding out about sickle cell can bring happiness or financial distress. She related a case where both parents carried the sickle cell trait. The couple had already had three children when they took the sickle cell test. After the positive result the coordinator said they begged the couple not to have a fourth child because it would be born with the disease. The fourth child was born and the parents waited a year before bringing the baby to the clinic. It died three months later.

We come into this world crying while all around us are smiling. May we so live that we go out of this world smiling while everybody around us is weeping.

RJR Industries Plan New Headquarters

Plans for a new corporate headquarters building in Winston-Salem were announced recently at the first annual meeting R.J. Reynolds Industries, Inc., has ever held in its hometown.

Holding the annual meeting in Winston-Salem rather than its usual site of Wilmington, Del., was one of many observances planned by the company for its centennial year.

The new building, to be available in late 1977, is one of the first major steps of the company's second century, Colin Stokes (Chairman) said. The new structure will be located in the company's Whitaker Park area of Winston-Salem and will house the staff of the parent company and headquarters staffs of two subsidiaries, RJR Archer, Inc., and RJR Foods. Inc. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. will continue to occupy the present headquarters building, a landmark in Winston-Salem for more than 45 years at Fourth and Main Streets.

"An air of confidence about our future" exists throughout Reynolds Industries, Stokes said. That view was also expressed by J. Paul Sticht, president and chief operating officer, in his report on operations of Reynolds Industries' subsidiaries in tobacco, containerized shipping, petroleum, convenience foods, and aluminum products and packaging.

With reference to Reynolds Industries' growing international nature, Stokes said that about a third of the company's sales and revenues is derived from outside the United States. In addition, approximately a third of the company's employees live outside this country.

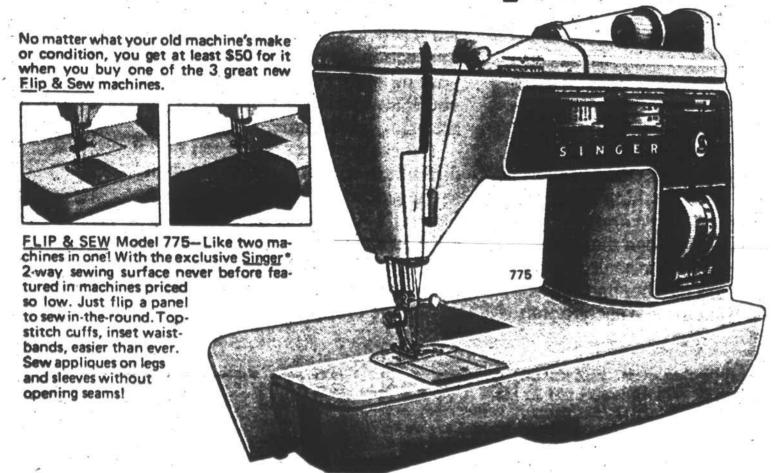

Sticht pointed to increasing international potential for the company's tobacco business.

"Reynolds' brands are now sold in 140 countries, with local manufacturing in 17 countries outside the U.S.," he said. "With this working base in the international markets, we believe we can now move aggressively totake advantage of opportunities that are now open to us.

The shareholders elected two new directors to the company's 17-member Board. They are Dr. Juanita M. Kreps, vice president of Duke University, Durham, N.C., and John Macomber, president of Celanese Corporation, New York. They succeed A.H. Galloway and S.A. Angotti. who are retiring from the Board.
