Man In The Street

'Space Program Cost Poor Man Too Much'

by Robert Eller Staff Reporter

Spacecraft from the U.S. and the USSR will hook-up Thursday in the first joint outer space venture in history. It is billed by the media as perhaps the greatest space event of all time.

However, many Winston-Salem citizens deplore the effort. This week "man in the street" talked to citizens about the space program and its significance to them. Most felt the space program was a waste money. Although some saw it as a quest for scientific knowledge, many felt the money put into the program could be more useful in other areas.

When asked what significance the space program had to him, John Gresham, 50 and unemployed, said, "None, the money they're spending could be used to provide jobs."

Mrs. R.D. Crews, a 52

year-old housewife said, "I'm proud of the space program. Its good for the country. They should give those brave astronauts a medal when they get back."

Mrs. Crews was alone for the most part, however, in her praise for the program.

Rev. Benjamin Booser, 45, stated, "the money spent on the space program could better be used in the black community for food and jobs for needy people. It may be good for better relations between the U.S. and Russia but its costing the poor man too much."

Joseph Venaville, a 36 year-old Western Electric employee said, "I don't think the average person thinks about it that much. It won't make that much difference to the people who are hungry how good the space program is. I think our hard earned tax money could be spent more wisely by helping to raise the living standard of the poor." Regina Johnson, a 16 year-old Wachovia employee stated, "I don't really know much about it. I suppose it helps but the money should be spent to feed the starving peoples of the world."

Charmaine Twitty, 21 and unemployed stated, "I think it's a waste of money. The money that they are spending to bring back moon rocks could be used to provide jobs for the unemployed and to feed the needy." Miss Twitty said she had just recently been laid off from her job.

Charles Hulka, 21, of Home Credit Company said, "It really leaves me hanging. It's good in a way but when they land on the moon people simply say "so what" I think the money could be used more wisely."

Elon Horton, 27, an Insurance representative said, "It doesn't hold my interest. I feel the U.S. and Russia are engaged in a challenge to each other. There is a small amount of good in it as far as scientific research is concerned but actually its more of a publicity stunt by the two countries than a scientific venture. I'd say it's a waste of money."

A local restaurant owner simply said he only hopes it doesn't interfere with the T.V. coverage of Tuesday night's All Star game.

A local farmer said he was angry because, "every time they go up there it rains and if it rains anymore my crops will be flooded."

Mrs. T. Twitty, 44 and the mother of Charmaine Twitty, agreed with her daughter and added, "I don't even want to talk about that space mess."
