UNC Offers Genetic Counseling Service

By Joe Sanders
UNC News Bureau

Hereditary defects are ruthlessly democratic.

They appear in all income levels, in every race and in any of man's social divisions.

Although some types of genetic defects are found almost solely within once race or ethnic group, no branch of the family of man is exempt from defective genes.

Nor do defects strike conveniently near large medical centers where the most recent knowledge about preventing them is being applied.

Such diseases as cystic fibrosis, sickle cell anemia and Down's Syndrome (mongolism) are transmitted genetically. Each year about 250,000 American babies are born with some type of physical or mental defect.

Because these defects occur in every community, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is taking help closer to the families who need it. Physicians are flying to health centers and hospitals in three North Carolina cities - Asheville, Charlotte, and Jacksonville.

Dr. Neil Kirkland heads a genetics research laboratory at CDI's Biological Sciences

Research Center. Since 1971, Dr. Kirkman also has directed the statewide Genetic Counseling Service funded by the N.C. State Board of Health.

Each year the service, which is located in Chapel Hill, counsels between 150 and 200 families for the first time. In addition, up to 400 families return to Chapel Hill for continued consultation.

Evag. Pat Cunningham

Sometimes my way gets dark and dim and the road ahead seems lonely. No thought will come for help today, as I call to the Master only. Father I stretch my hands to thee the only help I know. Standing at the rivers' edge watching the waters flow. Come dear Lord, fill my soul with heaven's peace and love. For I'm standing on the banks of life waiting for Jesus to come. I promised the Lord I'd go for Him regardless of what come my way. I've talked this road alone sometimes but with Jesus I'm here to stay...Ephesians 6 Chapter

Our Daily Bread

Dear Ones, Praise the Lord! Let us rejoice in the Lord, for Praise is comely for the up right Psalm 33:1 Sometimes our way may get cloudy, but we know that Jesus is still our help and strength. He's right here in times of trouble Let Him strengthen your heart through His word we're never alone. When others forsake you and leave you, talk about you saying all manner of evil, rejoice and be glad because we have a great reward in heaven. Are you ready for the Rapture? May God keep your mind til next time.
