FISHING

For Pleasure and Relaxation

by George Boole

Do you remember how you reacted when you caught your first fish? Most likely it was on a cane pole, and that was the moment that you got the fever. Believe it or not I cut my fishing teeth on a flyrod.

Being an impatient individual I could never see myself sitting on a bank waiting for some starving fish to come along and select my particular morsel. Most of all though I needed the exercise, walking especially. So I armed myself with a flyrod and hit the banks; on the move and hunting for the little creatures.

My first fishing trip was on an Easter Monday. After reading all of the literature that I could find on flyrod fishing and practice casting to a hoop and a water bucket I felt that I was ready. Coy Traynham, my guru in the pursuance of the finny arts, decided that we should start at High Rock Lake. We settled down on the back waters behind the home of Gladys and David Holmes, off highway number 8. For some reason my flies, bugs, and flyrod were not doing the trick. I did not get a strike.

Edward Lee Rosenberg, 1502 East 3rd St., and Tyrone Robinson, 2838 Urban St., are set up for a late afternoon of fishing at Winston Lake.

Coy soon decided that we should move to Dixie Shores on Badin Lake where we owned a cabin site. We were making preparations to fish when up comes two game warden, asking to see our permits. I had my state license, thanks to Coy's insistence that I get a license at the time that I purchased my fly outfit.

When we moved from High Rock, Davidson County to Badin, Montgomery County, Coy and "Mama" Traynham were not covered for out of county fishing. Well, we made our pilgrimage to Troy, N.C., county seat of Montgomery County, to pay the necessary fines. Our holiday fishing trip was ruined but my ardor for fishing never cooled off.

My first large fish, if you can call a two pound bass large, was caught on a black hometied streamer, using my bamboo flyrod. On this Spring morning I was loaded with enthusiasm and confidence. I looked a bit out of place, however, because all of the other fishermen had an armful of conventional fishing equipment. My flyrod sort of gave me the air of an expert, in view of the fact that I was about to venture out on the lake which was apparently too murky to fish anything except a plug.

Well, it seems that I was at the right place and surely at the right time. After several cast to the point of a small peninsula I engaged this silvery bass. That bass tail-walked four or five times, making runs in between.

The only instructions that I could remember was to keep the rod high with a tight line. It was the most exciting catch that I had ever experienced.

I landed it without a net, but I was as nervous as an elephant walking on a swinging bridge. With the catching of that bass, everyone thought surely that I was an expert.

Have you fulfilled your fishing obligation to a Kid?

LITTLE

Miss Little pointed out that "the state spent a lot of money trying to prove I was wrong when I said I was raped by a white man but when a white woman says she was raped by a black man, the state goes and spends a lot of money to try and prove she was right and the black man was wrong."

The Black Panthers are planning to organize public and financial support for Wilson's appeal. Charles Zollicoffer, Director of Public Relations for the party, said a demonstration is planned in Mocksville for August 31.

Zollicoffer said a defense fund would be established for Wilson who is currently serving a life sentence at Central Prison in Raleigh.

Miss Little must appear before the court of appeals in September for an appeal of her conviction on breaking and entering. She is free on bond pending outcome of the trial.

Miss Little said, "as long as blacks are being done injustices I will continue to fight. I recognize the fact that without people I would not be free today. I feel I have an obligation to try and help people who are in similar situations now that I have first hand knowledge of what the situation is like."

Miss Little and Black Panther leader Larry Little will leave for California August 21 to appear at the National Headquarters of the Black Panther Party at the community learning center on Sunday.
