

Trash, Debris In Neighborhoods

Irate Citizens Complain

The Team I police unit, last week, received 12 service calls mostly from irate residents in the East Winston area who do not like the idea of living in or around trash or other defacing debris.

The Team II unit covers the area from 9th Street to the Smith Reynolds Airport and from Liberty Street to New Walkertown Road. The complaints dealt mainly with obstructions in the streets and near homes or apartment areas.

People were complaining of tree limbs obstructing vehicles trying to park on Cameron Avenue. There were beer cans and bottles in vacant lots on East 14th, discarded clothes, that could have been used by Goodwill on East 18th, old box springs and mattresses as well as paint buckets. There was even an old sofa sitting on Booker Street.

On Addison Street around the 1300 block, residents protested to it being used as a garbage dump. City health officials felt that continued use of the area in this fashion would become a haven for rats and other unwelcome varmints.

On Claremont and 19th Street someone tried to throw a whole house out. There were two headboards for beds, two trash cans, an ironing board, window screens complete with window pane, and a bicycle wheel.

Patrolman E.C. Pope said that this was the largest number of reports of this kind in a long while. "It really shows that the people who live there are really trying to clean up their area and to keep it clean," he said. He added, "It also shows that the police do more than just arrest people."

Area residents made 12 complain calls last week in regards the trash and debris in their neighborhoods.
