FISHING

by George Boole

It's about that time to reminisce; thinking and talking about the good fishing days and even about the big ones that got away, and making some promises to yourself to do more fishing during the next season. While doing all this remembering you might as well occupy yourself with a bit of preventive measures. Clean up those reels, replace that worn line, take stock of your tackle box, sharpen the hooks on your favorite lures or do any number of other things that will put you in readiness if we happen to have a few spring-like days.

Really, fishing is not over for the dyed-in-the-wool fisherman. If your boat is rigged with all the sophisticated gear that we are now exposed to, a trip out on the lake can put you over big bass that will have congregated in the deep structured waters. The weather may be a little nippy, but if you do not mind, and bundle up for warmth you will find that crappie are still accommodating. In the big lakes the waters have not turned over yet and you will find the waters affording a comfort zone for the fish.

Minnnows should be the bait of today, knowing that and storing fat to take them through the winter low energy months. However, if you are using artificials it will be safe to slow them down because the fish will not be striking as furiously as they have been during the summer season.

Now is a good time to drop a hint that you need some new fishing gear, dropped in the right places Ole Santa might just take note.

If you have never been introduced to the flyrod, this is good time to gather some information on its use. Every lover of bream fishing should be armed with a flyrod. The fun derived from watching those old rusty Bream hitting top water lures is incomparable. The flyrod is also excellent for crappie and bass fishing, too.

BETTER WINTER WITH DRISTAN.

Today's Dristan Tablets give you more colds relief than Contac or Aspirin alone.
