

Christmas

Whoever said, "Christmas is for kids" had a good point. Every year at this time, loving parents, grand-parents and friends buy toys for children, from toddlers to teenagers. It is easy to be dazzled by the array of toys available; however, the Better Business Bureau advises shoppers to make sure the toy purchased is safe as well as suitable for the child's use.

Read the Label

As with any product purchase, it is a good idea to read the label for information on construction and usage. Parents interested in buying painted toys for young children should look for those labeled "non-toxic". Similarly, some toys made out of fabric products might catch fire accidentally; be sure to look for the words "flame-resistant" on the label.

Check, too, to see if an age recommendation is provided on the label. Toys intended for older children may be too complex and potentially dangerous for younger children.

Safety is Important

Along with reading the label, be sure to be aware of the following:

Sharp edges: Tiny toys or toys with small removable parts can be swallowed or become lodged in a child's windpipe, ears or nose. Remember, too, that a cute squeaky toy may prove dangerous if the squeak mechanism can be removed and swallowed by a young child.

Sharp points: Toys which have pins or staples can puncture easily an unsuspecting child. Even that cuddly stuffed animal may have barbed eyes or wired limbs which have a potential to cut, scratch, or stab.

Loud noises: Toy caps and some noise-making guns or other toys can produce sounds at noise levels that may damage a child's hearing. Be sure to look for the label required by law on boxes of caps producing noises above a certain level: "Warning--Do not fire closer than 1 foot to the ear."

Do not use indoors.
Propelled objects: Missiles and similar flying toys are potentially dangerous as they could injure a child's eyes. Arrows or darts used by children should have soft cork tips, rubber suction cups or other protective tips in order to prevent injury.

Special Tips for Electric Toys

Those buying electric toys for children this year should take special precautions, keeping in mind that even the safest electrical toy can cause injury. Be sure that the electrical toy is intended for a child old enough to play with it safely.

Electrical toys are required by law to come with instruction booklets. The booklet tells how to operate the toy and points out clearly the dangers involved. Be sure to read it carefully, and then read it with the child. Point out any warning labels on the toy, explain why they are there and how they toy should be used. It is a good idea to use the toy a few times with the child to make sure he or she understands its use.

Always supervise the child when the toy is in use. And be sure the plug of any electrical toy fits snugly into the wall outlet or extension cord.
