picking up substantial yardage too. Sophomore Robert Simmons played perhaps his finest game of the season, going 12 yards to give the Rams their first score of the game.

"Robert Simmons probably has the best moves of anyone on the team," Hayes said. "He's had some problems getting ready to play football this season. He's been a little down on himself lately, but I think his effort will help him come out of it. When he's mentally ready to play, he can really run the football."

Though Hayes was complimentary of his team's offensive effort, he said the defense turned in a fine effort as well. Despite seeing four and five wide receivers from the Viking offense, the Rams gave up few long passes.

"They were running complicated pass patterns, but only getting five or six yards when they completed a pass," Hayes said. "We weren't worried about that because we knew we would get some sacks eventually."

"They moved the ball a little, but we got to them enough to keep them from getting in scoring position," said Hayes. "We held them to minus 48 yards rushing, so I think the defense definitely played a good game."

The Rams squandered two scoring opportunities in the first half but still managed to keep their momentum going. After driving to the Viking 26-yard line, Winbush fumbled to end one drive. Later in the first quarter, Winbush had a pass intercepted in the Viking end zone to thwart another Ram threat.

The first quarter ended in a 0-0 deadlock before the Rams scored in the opening minute of the second quarter on Simmons' run. Moments later, Tim Platt recovered a fumble by Viking quarterback Eddie Morris on the ECSU 15-yard line. Winbush went the final yard to paydirt to put the Rams up 14-0.

Following another Viking fumble, this time by all-CIAA wide receiver Reginald Langhorne, the Rams marched 67 yards in seven plays to go on top 21-0. Leonard do Horn got the Ram touchdown on a 14-yard jaunt.

Elizabeth City threatened in the second half, driving deep into WSSU territory. However, the Ram defense refused to give in and the Vikings had to settle for a 38-yard field goal by Jerome Ingram.

The Rams got their next points on an electrifying 42-yard run by backup quarterback Dana Walker. The sophomore from Richmond broke containment and outspurred several Vikings to the end zone.

"Dana is a fine quarterback," said Hayes. "I'm glad that we could bring him along as we have."

The final WSSU score came on a four-yard pass from Winbush to Simmons.

With the win, the Rams' record now stands at 8-1 overall and 6-0 in conference play. Their final regular season game is on Saturday at Bowman Gray Stadium against St. Paul's, which is 1-5 in the Northern Division and 3-6 overall.

While Hayes said his team has been impressive as of late, the Rams can't look past the Tigers to the CIAA championship game Nov. 17.

"We're going to prepare for them like we would for anyone else," said Hayes. "We going to work hard and try do what it takes to win."

"St. Paul's presents something new for us," he said. "They have a slanting 5-2 defense that could give us some problems because we haven't faced a slanting defensive line this season."

The four-year system will allow freshmen and sophomores more time to learn the systems used at their schools. By the time they reach the varsity teams, they'll already have two years experience under their belts.

For years, Greensboro Page and High Point Andrews (both of which have junior varsity teams), to name a few, have fielded teams that have had an edge in experience, but no more. With the change in the local schools, there will be a noticeable difference in the future.

Looking at the overall high school sports picture locally, it looks as if the decision to go to a four-year plan was very timely. While the program at Carver suffers this year, the move seems to have done more to help than hinder high school sports.

FACTS OF LAW

The United States Supreme Court is a court of last resort; from this court, all cases are finally decided and decisions are binding.

If a landlord wrongfully enters upon the tenant's premises without consent, it is considered a trespass and the tenant can sue. Most leases spell out the circumstances under which the landlord can enter.

It is larceny, a punishable criminal offense, to steal domestic animals such as horses, cattle or hogs that are valuable for work purposes or for food.

A store or merchant is responsible for any product defect which a purchaser could not discover by reasonable inspection. The responsibility extends not only to cost of repair or replacement, but to any injury which may have occurred.
