Faculty Senate memo questions WSSU finances

By ROBIN ADAMS
Chronicle Assistant Editor

It's being called "The Blue Bomb." Blue, because of the color of the paper it's printed on and bomb, no doubt, because it asks pointed questions about budget allocations at Winston-Salem State University.

A three-page memo from the WSSU Faculty Senate entitled "What's Going On?" was distributed to faculty members last week. It is signed by Dr. Elwanda Ingram, chairman of the WSSU Faculty Senate and it characterizes the school's financial and business practices as "haphazard, indistinct, unaccountable, and arbitrary."

Ingram would not comment on the memo and refused to give the Chronicle a copy. She said she preferred to wait until she has met with other faculty and heard their reactions to the memo.

"We are just raising some questions," Ingram said.

Faculty members have been encouraged to read the memo and give their responses to their Faculty Senate representatives, said Ingram. The senate will then meet on April 10 to discuss the memo and decide what further action to take, if any.

Interim Chancellor Haywood Wilson was out of town until later this week and could not be reached.

"The University's financial and administrative practices over the past seven years have been haphazard, indistinct, unaccountable, and arbitrary to such a degree to have clearly and specifically in-

YMCA names director for Winston Lake facility

North Carolina native Joyner picked to succeed Glover

By ROBIN ADAMS
Chronicle Assistant Editor

Norman E. Joyner, associate executive director of the Weingart Urban Center YMCA in Los Angeles and a North Carolina native, has been named the new executive director of the Winston Lake Family YMCA, local YMCA officials announced earlier this week.

Joyner, 40, will assume the post on April 29.

"The decision was a difficult one to make," said Brian Cormier, general manager of the Central YMCA, which governs the county's YMCAs. "The Patterson Board (of Management) and everybody involved was pretty well split down the middle on two finalists."

An eight-member search committee reviewed more than 80 applications and narrowed the list to nine applicants, all of whom were interviewed, said Cormier. The nine were further narrowed to two, Joyner and Everett T. Christmas Sr. of King of Prussia, Penn.

After much discussion on the two finalists, Cormier said, he, as immediate supervisor, made the decision to offer Joyner the job.

"The vast majority felt they could go with either," said Cormier. "Both were outstanding. We were in a 'win-win' situation with either candidate. We had the finest two candidates in the country in regards to what we were looking for."

Cormier said he decided to go with Joyner because he has experience with a YMCA that closely resembles Winston Lake. The Weingart Urban Center is a new YMCA, said Cormier, and Joyner was instrumental in its opening. In addition, Joyner has marketing, membership and funding experience, said Cormier.

The new Winston Lake YMCA will open as the successor to the Patterson Avenue YMCA in May.

"It was my feeling that here's a guy fresh out of the largest and most successful metro system in the country and (who) has gone through what we are getting ready to go through," said Cormier. "He will be able to bring his abilities and knowledge."

By ROBIN ADAMS
Chronicle Assistant Editor

The pastor of a Winston-Salem Baptist church has been found guilty of drunken driving and sentenced to 20 days in jail.

The Rev. Emory L. Clark Jr., pastor of Second New Bethel Baptist Church, was found guilty in Guilford County District Court on March 27 of driving while impaired. Charges against Clark for the possession of marijuana were dismissed.

According to the clerk of court, Clark was placed on unsupervised probation, fined $200 and cost of court and prohibited from driving and being involved in any alcohol-related offenses. He also was denied limited-driving privileges. If Clark violates his probation, he could serve between 18 and 24 months in jail.

Black aldermen protest, contract awarded anyway

By DAVID R. RANKIN
Chronicle Staff Writer

"I just won't vote for this thing," said Southeast Ward Alderman Larry W. Womble, "It's a smack of arrogance in my face."

Womble was referring to a $4.06 million contract the Board of Aldermen awarded Monday night to the Fowler-Jones Construction Co. to build an M.C. Convention Center center parking deck. The board voted 5-4 along racial lines in favor of the construction company, with Mayor Wayne A. Corpening casting the tie-breaking vote during a marathon, seven-and-one-half-hour meeting.

The board also voted 5-4 along racial lines to award a $8.19 million contract to Fowler-Jones to expand the convention center. Again, Corpening cast the tie-

'I thought the police would be there:' Protester recalls Nov. 3, 1979, violence

By ROBIN ADAMS
Chronicle Assistant Editor

A demonstrator who was sprayed with 30 shotgun pellets during the anti-Klan rally in Greensboro on Nov. 3, 1979, burst into tears as she described watching fellow demonstrator Sandy Smith die.

"Sandy had a bullet hole in the top of her head or forehead," testified Frankie Powell, a Winston-Salem resident, Tuesday afternoon. "I seem to recall closing Sandy's eyes."

Powell, who described herself as a labor union organizer but said she has never been a member of the Communist Party, testified during the third week in court of a $48 million civil suit filed by the 16 widows and survivors of the Greensboro "Death to the Klan" rally.

"I personally didn't expect to see any (Klansmen). From everything I have ever heard ... I had never heard of them (Klan) doing anything during the day."

-- Frankie Powell

Powell, the daughter of Winston-Salem black socialist organizer Marty Penn, was seven and one-half months pregnant during the rally. The rally, scheduled to start at noon, was only a preface to an educational conference on the Klan, said Powell. The plan, she

Coliseum committee presents proposal

By ROBIN ADAMS

After three months of surveys, research and meetings, the Citizens' Coliseum Committee has proposed to build a new coliseum and annex building for an estimated $24 million.

The committee presented its recommendation to the Board of Aldermen at a breakfast meeting Wednesday morning. If the board approves, tentative plans call for a $20 million bond referendum this summer to finance the project. Wake Forest University, which wants to use the coliseum for basketball games, has pledged to donate the other
