dent of Grace Masonry and Construction Co. Inc. and the Minority Business League president. Grace said the league plans to update the directory each year to keep it as current and complete as possible.

Grace said the directory helps dispel the notion that there aren't enough black businesses in the city and county for both consumers and other businesses to patronize.

He also said he hopes the directory helps encourage black people to do business with black firms.

"We want to try to eradicate the excuse that black folk don't know about other black folk who are in business," he said.

Grace said the directory is the most current of its kind locally.

The bound, approximately 35-page directory lists businesses alphabetically under various categories, including each firm's name, address, phone number and operating radius. The directory was co-sponsored by the Sara Lee Corp. and the R.H. Barringer Distributing Co., said its chairman, Ike Howard.

Howard said it was compiled with the help of the Chronicle.

the business department at Winston-Salem State University, the Triad Business Development Center and North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Co.

The directory costs $10 per copy and may be purchased by contacting Grace at 725-4283.

The Minority Business League, which consists of 30 black area businesses, will hold its annual banquet Thursday night at the 6:00 in the Student Union Ballroom at Winston-Salem State.

The guest speaker will be Lewis H. Myers, assistant secretary of the state commerce department.

University Women

and RJR Nabisco Inc.

Dr. Scales says membership in NCNW is open to anyone interested in "enhancing the quality of life of women." The group meets the second Tuesday of each month at Shiloh Baptist Church and Dr. Scales urges young women in the community to attend.

"Anyone can join," she says. "We encourage men, women, blacks and whites to join us."

Dr. Scales feels the Saturday conference will help women determine where they are now and where they need to go from here.

"We have the same problems with a different approach," she says. "We've got to take advantage of all our opportunities to stay abreast of what's going on. Every day should be a new challenge, a new opportunity for growth."
