

Lt. Gov. Wilder to address Urban League

The Winston-Salem Urban League will host its annual Equal Opportunity Dinner Sept. 24 at 7:30 p.m. at Benton Convention Center.

L. Douglas Wilder, Lieutenant Governor of Virginia, will deliver the keynote address. Wilder has achieved national prominence on the political scene as the highest-ranking elected African American official in state government.

Thomas J. Elijah Jr., president of the local affiliate, says, "We are delighted that our constituents will have the opportunity to hear one of the most dynamic speakers in the country today. Mr. Wilder's exemplary record of public service as a statesman will certainly have a positive impact on his future as an 'up and coming leader' on the national horizon."

"I don't have a lot of leisure," she said. "I work harder than when I was at work."

But Mrs. Ross doesn't mind the hard work because helping people is what she believes in.

"I think everybody has a purpose and mine, I think, is to help people less fortunate than I am," she said. "I can't help it. It's my calling."

Mrs. Ross also keeps busy reading, being with her husband, looking after her only grandson, spending time with her mother, who has Alzheimer's disease, and doing volunteer work.

A product of Atkins High School (now Atkins Middle School), Mrs. Ross attended Winston-Salem State University for one year before moving on to Chicago to finish her college education. She has taught school in Chicago as well as worked for the Illinois Labor Department.

It was when her father became extremely ill that she returned to her native Winston-Salem in 1969 to be near him.

He died a few years later.

Before getting her job with the Winston-Salem Housing Authority, Mrs. Ross had worked for a state-sponsored employment program.
