ANC urges Mandela to disband youth group

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa -- An African National Congress official said Tuesday the guerrilla movement has instructed activist Winnie Mandela to disband a controversial group of youths who sometimes guard her.

ANC spokesman Tom Sebina, speaking from the group's headquarters in Lusaka, Zambia, said the message was sent to Mrs. Mandela after discussions among the organization's leaders, including ANC President Oliver Tambo. Balloon release From Page A1

Each balloon had a blue slip of paper, with the school's address on it, attached to the end of its string.

"We're going to try to trace which balloon will travel the farthest, and we hope people who find them will write our school," said Sandy McMonagle, the school's principal.

"We rejoice with our sister schools all over the world in celebrating the Catholic schools difference," said Kathy Taormina, treasurer of the Home and School Association -- similar to the Parents/Teachers Association in the public schools. "In Catholic Schools, students explore their faith through classes and activities in the scriptures, sacraments, church... Catholic schools stress the value of self-discipline and commitment."

"We're remembering Catholic education, of years past and the present," McMonagle said of the more than 274 students who participated.

Other activities throughout the week included a teacher appreciation day on Tuesday and an open house on Wednesday. Today (Thursday) the students will go to mass and have a pancake breakfast. Students are out of school Friday.

About 20 percent, or 55 Afro-American students attend Our Lady of Mercy. The school is open to Catholics and non-Catholics.
