Carver Coach Says His First Passion Is Competing

By DEBY JO FERGUSON
Chronicle Sports Writer

Carver JV girls' coach Rodney McKoy is a graduate of Carver High School, and a college graduate of Winston-Salem State University with a BS Degree in Physical Education.

"I played sports most of my life, and I also played football while I was in college," McKoy said.

"It's the passion to compete that got me started in coaching, and coaching is my second passion.

"So really, by coaching I get a sense of competing without actually having to compete myself," McKoy added.

"McKoy has been the JV girls basketball coach and varsity football coach at Carver for two years.

"Our basketball team has its ups and downs. At times we are positive and at other times we're not.

"The thing that has hurt us most this year is having no experience. None of my girls have ever played basketball before. It would help if girls' sports were played in the middle schools.

"Experience alone is killing us. We should have won 10 games that we lost on lack of experience alone," McKoy continued.

"As for my top players, I chose Sherri Sullivan and Jamie Rahmaan. Sherri is a ninth grader and has the best knowledge of basketball on our team, and she hasn't played except for at the YMCA and pick up ball.

"Jamie runs my offense court. She has progressed like night and day. She's now my starter at point guard and can change from two-point guard, to two-point forward any time," McKoy said.

Jamie Rahmaan "We need to work on our offense to finish out the season. I need to drive the ball to the basket more, then shoot."

Sherri Sullivan "Coach McKoy expects us to give it our all and never give up. I feel he is a good coach and if he had some help he could assist us more on an individual basis."

"I feel next year the girls will be more confident and understand the movement better. The basic knowledge will be there, all we have to do is build one it," McKoy concluded.
