

Black Classical Musicians To Hold Symposium

A symposium for black musicians with careers in classical music will be held April 16-18. The event, titled "Gateways: Classical Music and the Black Musician," will consist of open rehearsals, recitals and concert performances as well as a round-table discussion. All events take place at Reynolds Auditorium, except the organ recital by Paula Harrell, which will be in Crawford Hall at the North Carolina School of the Arts. All events are free and open to the public. For more information or a schedule of events, call Liz Bergstone at 724-3808.

The purpose of the event is to increase the visibility of the black classical musician and to heighten the public's awareness of the black musician's contribution to the field of classical music; to establish role models for young black musicians and to encourage them to study and to seek careers in the field of classical music; and to provide an opportunity for black classical musicians from all over the country to meet, exchange ideas and revitalize their musical energy.

Michael Morgan, assistant conductor of the Chicago Symphony, will be the conductor.

Participating musicians will be Alfred Duckett, Eugene Moye, Sanford Allen, Raymond Jackson, Delphin and Romain, Winifred Stark, Eileen T. Cline, Joy Cline, Paula Harrell and Amadi Hummings.

Although progress has been made in developing talented black classical musicians, many of today's major orchestras across the country have few, if any, black musicians in their ranks. Recently many orchestras have received negative comments on their obvious lack of cultural diversity from civic and government agencies. These agencies have brought pressure to bear on the orchestras' governing bodies to hire more minority players. But without the support and encouragement of successful role models, many talented young black musicians lose heart and give up the long and difficult struggle to perform. So the pool of black musicians is limited and many young musicians never get the opportunity they deserve. By instituting the Gateways symposium, the organizers hope to improve this situation.

A local university said it welcomes the symposium.

"Classical music has long been a tradition at Winston-Salem State University, and is one of the fundamental ingredients of our music curriculum," said Chancellor Cleon F. Thompson Jr. of WSSU. "We have showcased works by the noted composers Undine S. Moore, William Dawson and Noah Ryder, who was once a member of the music faculty. We also had the pleasure of having on campus Dr. Billy Taylor, Andre Watts, Natalie Hinderas, Simon Estes, Armenta Hummings and others.

"The Gateways festival will add substantially to our appreciation and understanding of classical music and the contributions of African-American musicians," Thompson said.

The co-organizers of the event are: James Fowler, vice president of Marketing, Piedmont Publishing Co., and board member of the Winston-Salem/Piedmont Triad Symphony; Robert Yekovitch, dean of the School of Music, NCSA; and Peter Perret, music director of Winston-Salem/Piedmont Triad Symphony.

"C.B." and Lois Hauser

50th Anniversary

Charlie Brady "C.B." Hauser and Lois Elizabeth Hauser celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary April 4 by visiting York, S.C., where they were married, and by making a special contribution to the Building Fund of Mt. Zion Baptist Church. The couple has two children. The couple's daughter, Fay Elizabeth, and her husband, Louis Price, live in Van Nuys, Calif. Their daughter Lois Patricia and her husband, Robert Golding live in Bristol, England. The couple has one grandson and one granddaughter. Hauser is a retired professor of Winston-Salem State University and a former member of the House of Representatives. Mrs. Hauser is a retired teacher of the Winston-Salem/Forsyth County School System.

Local Fund Raiser Featured on "Today Show"

Willard Scott of NBC's "Today Show" was so impressed with the originality and creativity of a local fund raising program that he decided to feature it on his weather segment.

The fund raiser is the Second Annual EGGStravaganza Celebrity Egg Auction, an auction of plastic eggs decorated and autographed by notables from stage, screen, sports and politics sponsored by SciWorks and Hanes Mall, with the funds raised addressing the educational needs of local unprivileged children. Proceeds from the Second Annual EggStravaganza Celebrity Egg Auction held at Hanes Mall on April 10 benefit Science Opportunities for Underprivileged Youth, a program providing scholarship money for underprivileged children, allowing them to take part in numerous SciWorks programs and workshops.

Last year, nearly 75 notables, including Roseanne and Tom Arnold, Bill Cosby, Oprah Winfrey, William Shatner, Chris Evert, Steve Martin, Donald Trump and, of course, Willard Scott have provided decorated and eggs.

This year, nearly 75 notables, including Roseanne and Tom Arnold, Bill Cosby, Oprah Winfrey, William Shatner, Chris Evert, Steve Martin, Donald Trump and, of course, Willard Scott have provided decorated and signed eggs.

Hanes Mall is currently displaying the celebrity eggs through April 9, allowing the public to place bids on the eggs before they enter into public auction on April

10. Interested persons can bid on the eggs as they are on display, but will need to attend the auction to insure they receive the egg of their choice.

The goals of SciWorks are to provide educational opportunities in the natural and physical sciences for all ages through hands-on exhibits, programs and collections and to offer experiences in science that will foster a better understanding and appreciation of the world in which we live.
