Winston-Salem Housing Authority officials held a ribbon-cutting ceremony on June 23 for the dedication of new playground equipment at the Cleveland Avenue Homes community.

Art Milligan, the housing authority's executive director, and Mayor Martha S. Wood were on hand to praise those who were responsible for the new equipment.

James Rousseau, vice president of planning and development for Forsyth Technical Community College and one of those who led the effort for the new equipment, said

Jungle Gyms, swings and ladders represented a "positive" effort from the housing authority, the Winston-Salem Police Department and the city's Recreation Department.

Rousseau, who said the equipment cost over $5,000, also credited Police Officer Mike Carico, who patrols the community on foot, for bringing the playground's disrepair to the attention of neighborhood leaders.

"This cooperative effort is typical of the way problems are solved in this community," said Rousseau, a member of the Cleveland Avenue Task Force.
