

43 New Members Selected for 1993 Leadership Winston-Salem Class

Leadership Winston-Salem announces the members of the 1993-94 Class. The 43-member class was chosen from a pool of more than 246 applicants.

Leadership Winston-Salem strives to improve the community by providing opportunities for direct and personal communications among community leaders. The organization provides awareness of the major current community issues, the understanding of the community's problems and the appreciation of differing views and contributions to Winston-Salem.

Annually, established leaders are selected to participate in the nine-month Leadership Winston-Salem program, which begins in September and ends in May. Each class of participants represents a cross-section of the community—business, labor, education, the professions, health care, human services, government, elected officials, nonprofit agencies, community volunteers, neighborhood leaders, black and white, male and female.

The class program is designed to offer a base of information and experience upon which the class members can: heighten their awareness of community problems; increase their capability to influence decision-making; and extend their network of contracts with other community leaders. The programs, planned by experts in the topic area, involve participants in interaction with people, places and issues in such topics as education, the economic environment, government and the political process, health care, social services, criminal justice and race relations.

Members of the 1993-94 Class are: Robert E. Sawyer, Home Moravian Church; Sandra F. Seeber, the Enrichment Center; Gordon H.T. Sheerman, Salem Trust Bank; David L. ## Two More Announce Plans to Run

By MARK R. MOSS
Chronicle Staff Writer

Two African Americans filed Friday to run for alderman in their respective wards in East Winston.

Jim Conrad, 65, the owner of Conrad's Hair Design East, will run against Alderman Vivian Burke in the Northeast ward. Jimmy Lee Bonham, owner of Hair by Jimi, will run for the East ward seat that went up for grabs when Virginia Newell announced her retirement last month.

"You hear the cry from the community for change. . . ." said Conrad, "and from my way of thinking I represent change."

Change, he said, will be the focus of his campaign. Conrad, a Democrat, said he was concerned about the fears of senior citizens when it comes to crime, and feels that the community's "relationship with the police department would be much better if we have a meeting of the minds." Bonham, also a Democrat, enters a race in the East Ward that promises to be a lively one. Two women, both Democrats, have already declared their candidacies. Bonham, 38, lost his first bid for public office in 1989, when Newell defeated him in the primary. In a prepared statement, Bonham said: "I am uncomfortable with the way East Winston is at the present time. I care about the welfare of the community. I am not running for what I can get out of the deal, but what I can give."

Bonham, who is also a Baptist minister, said he is "particularly troubled by surveys that show East Winston lagging behind the rest of the city in economic development, housing and new jobs - while enduring a higher crime rate."
