

WSSU Faculty Named To Endowed Chairs

In the realization of a major goal of Winston-Salem State University's $25 million Centennial Campaign, three new faculty members have been named to distinguished professorships and will occupy endowed chairs in accounting and computer science.

The newly endowed professorships and one that was created in 1992-93 in religion and ethics are the first ever to be established at WSSU.

The distinguished professorships receive matching funds from the University of North Carolina Trust Fund when the donors' pledges are complete, increasing the endowed amount by one-third, under a program established by the North Carolina General Assembly in 1985.

Holders of the distinguished professorships are expected to provide leadership in classroom teaching, research and general scholarship endeavors.

Leslie W. Weisenfeld, the distinguished professor of accounting, arrived on campus from Clarkson University in Potsdam, N.Y., where she has been an assistant professor in the Department of Accounting and Law since 1987.

She fills the Sara Lee Corporation Chair in Accounting. The chair will be fully endowed in 1996. An interim salary supplement is being paid by a grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation.

In computer science are: Roger Marshall, formerly a professor of computer science at the Florida Institute of Technology; and Atanas Radenski, who was an associate professor in the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science at Southwest Minnesota State University.

Marshall holds the R.J. Reynolds Chair in Computer Science, made possible by a grant from the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., and an interim grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation.

Radenski, who fills the Paul Fulton Chair of Computer Science, has advanced degrees in computer science from Sofia University in Sofia, Bulgaria, where he was an associate professor in the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science.

The professorship was established by a grant from the C.D. Spangler Jr. Foundation to honor Paul Fulton, president of the Sara Lee Corporation.

Fulton has been a WSSU trustee for the past eight years and has served as national chairman of the university's Centennial Campaign to raise $25 million from the private sector. The Delta Sigma Theta Sorority has provided a salary supplement for the Paul Fulton Chair while that endowment is being completed.

The Rev. Cedric S. Rodney was appointed last year to the James A. Gray Professorship in Religion and Ethics, which is funded by the James A. Gray Endowment and administered by the Winston-Salem Foundation.

Rodney is program coordinator of the symposium, "Religion and Ethics in 21st Century America," a series that began last year under a Gray endowment grant.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Children's Halloween Workshops Available

Winston-Salem's Sawtooth Center for Visual Art will hold two Halloween craft workshops for children on Oct. 2 from 12-3 p.m. The fee for each class is $20 and includes all materials.

Preregistration is required for all Sawtooth Center classes and workshops. For information and registration, call the Sawtooth Center for Visual Art weekdays between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. at 723-7395.

"Clay Goblins" is open to children, ages 5 and up. Children will make scary clay candle-holding monsters that can decorate a Halloween party table or guard the family jack-o-lantern. Goblins will be glazed and fired to be picked up in time for Halloween.

"Soft Sculpture Halloween Characters" is open to children, ages 10 and up. Instructor Leslie Karpinski, a local mixed-media and soft-sculpture artist, will teach this class, exploring the many possibilities of creating various goblins, ghouls and spooks. Participants will make characters with soft-cloth bodies that can be decorated and embellished with a variety of materials. Some sewing skills are helpful.

▲ Room Dedicated

The Northwood Estates Know-Your-Neighbor Club will have its "Dedication of a Reading Room" at the Carl H. Russell Recreation Center on Monday at 7 p.m.

Vivian Burke will be the speaker.

Other participants on the program include: Nick Jamison, director of the Recreation and Parks Department of the City of Winston-Salem; the Rev. Will E. Chambers, who will deliver the invocation and closing prayer; Louis Lowery, director of the Carl Russell Recreation Center; Naomi Jones, club treasurer and past president; Gertrude Murchison, club president; and R.V. Boone Sr., who will be the master of ceremonies.

The project is designed to stimulate the users of the Reading Room to greater interest in learning and studying. The club will supply books, periodicals, magazines and newspapers.

Residents of the Carver and surrounding areas are encouraged to support the project.

▲ Press Secretary

Robin Adams, a former reporter and assistant editor of the Winston-Salem Chronicle, has joined Rep. Mel Watt's staff as press secretary.

Adams will be responsible for all media inquiries and available to provide assistance to both the state and national media.

Adams has over 12 years of print media experience working for several North Carolina newspapers. At the Greensboro News and Record, she was a 1993 recipient of a North Carolina Press Association Award for column writing. She also covered education and minority affairs for the newspaper.

She also has worked as an editor for the Agricultural Extension Service at N.C. A&T State University. The Burlington native graduated from Elon College in 1981.

Junior League Recognized

The Junior League of Winston-Salem, Inc. attended a national Organizational Development Institute to discuss ways to heighten its community impact and to foster member satisfaction.

The Institute took place in Raleigh on Sept. 11-12 and focused on a goal-centered approach to strategic planning including workshops geared to specifics of community programming, communications, leadership development, fund development, and membership.

The Institute was attended by Becky Saunders, President-Elect; Carrie Malloy, Recording Secretary; Marie Arcuri, Treasurer; Susan Stewart, Focus Chairman; and Dru Simpson, Community Research and Project Development Chairman.

The Organizational Development Institute was presented by the Association of Junior Leagues International, Inc., an international organization of women committed to promoting voluntarism and to improving the community through the effective action and leadership of trained volunteers. The Junior League reaches out to women of all races, religions, and national origins who demonstrate an interest in and a commitment to voluntarism. Its purpose is exclusively educational and charitable.
