

Boys Club Participated in Violence Prevention Meeting in Atlanta

The Winston-Salem Salvation Army Boys Club joined national experts, other local youth development professionals and community residents from the southeast region in addressing the issue of violence at a conference in Atlanta.

Representing Winston-Salem was James Blackburn, outreach director, the Salvation Army Boys Club; Lloyd Booker, juvenile court counselor, 21st Judicial district; Preston Mack, Winston-Salem Housing authority; Harrison Davis, Housing Authority security; and Belinda Peoples, Winston-Salem/Forsyth County schools. "The incidence of violence is a daily occurrence in Winston-Salem and the Boys Club is taking a lead in reducing the causes. The opportunity to attend this meeting enhances our skills in dealing with this issue and allows us to effectively collaborate with schools, court, and public housing in addressing the problem," said Don Moore, Executive Director of the Boys club.

The conference, sponsored by Boys & Girls Club of America and funded by a grant from the Bureau of Justice Assistance, U.S. Department of Justice, covered the nature and causes of violence; strategies for securing Club staff, members, and facilities; procedures to prevent violent incidents; crisis management; implementation of a nationally-recognized violence prevention in their communities.

"The need to develop a proactive plan to combat the problem of violence has never been greater," said Tom Garth, president of Boys & Girls Clubs in America. "Violent crime involving youth grew by 40% from 1882 to 1991. Murder committed by youth during that period increased by 92.7%. The objective of this meeting is to help Clubs develop local violence prevention initiatives so we can continue to provide a safe and positive environment for your young people."

Attending the meeting, held at the Atlanta Marriott Perimeter Center, were representatives of Boys & Girls Club from Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia. Special guest speakers include Beverly Coleman-Miller, M.D., president of the BCM Group in Washington, D.C., and a leading authority on social, community and public health issues; special Agent Allan King of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Mr. Thomas Robellar, a community affairs specialists from the Bridgeport, Conn., Police Department. Upcoming prevention conferences will be held in Chicago and Dallas.

The Winston-Salem Salvation Army Boys Club has served the youth of Winston-Salem for 54 years. Located at 1922 Martin Luther King Drive, the Club provides programs for more than 800 boys in the area of drug and alcohol prevention, delinquency intervention, health and fitness, career exploration, and educational enhancement.

City Receives US Small Business Administration Grant for Tree Planting

The city's Recreation and Parks Department was notified by governor Hunt's office that it had been selected to receive a U.S. Small Business Administration Tree Planting Program grant.

The Recreation Department project at Winston Lake Park received $20,000 through the department of Natural Resources.

Joe Jackson, assistant park superintendent, says the project involves planting 250 hardwood trees at the entrance to Winston Lake Park off New Walkertown Road and around the planned ball fields.

Maples, oak and ornamental trees will be planted in the spring of 1994.
