To celebrate the Week of the Young Child, Crisis Control Ministry (CCM) and the Forsyth Association for the Education of Young Children (FAEYC) are inviting preschool children and their families to join a cereal drive. The donated cereal will be distributed by the ministry's food pantry to hungry families in Forsyth County. Wee Care! will kick off during the Week of the Young Child, April 7-13, and continue throughout April. A national celebration of young children birth to age 7, the Week of the Young Child highlights the importance of families, early childhood professionals and communities working together to support every child's healthy development.

could not be reached before press time, but Winston-Salem is likely competing against cities such as Richmond, which has hosted the tournament for the last several years.

Other factors will also play in the city's favor, McCoy believes, including recent renovations at Joel Coliseum and the city's reputation for putting on a good show, a reputation gained during the CIAA's stint here.

Mayor Allen Joines said he is excited about the possibility of Winston-Salem hosting another basketball tournament.

"I have been very supportive of the project...I feel it offers some good possibilities," Joines said. Joines has held informal talks with members of the Board of Aldermen about the bid. He says he has gotten positive feedback.

Joines added that landing the MEAC would be another notch on the city's belt. In recent months, Winston-Salem has landed a Davis Cup qualifying event and an AAU girls basketball tournament.

"It would be a growing indication of the city's ability to compete for events such as this," Joines said.

The Greater Winston-Salem Sports Commission has been a silent player in the city's recent success with landing sporting events. The volunteer commission worked closely with the CVB while the bid was being put together.

Dennis Hatchell, the chairman of the commission, said that support for the MEAC coming to Winston-Salem is strong. Chancellor Harold Martin of Winston-Salem State University has given the effort strong support, said Hatchell, even though his school is a member of the CIAA.

Hatchell believes that outsiders looking at the city have to like what they see.

"We are a good-sized town. We have a lot of good restaurants and hotels, and (this) is obviously still a very strong basketball area," Hatchell said.

MEAC officials are expecting to announce their decision in June. Hatchell is optimistic about the city's chances.

"I think our chances are very good," he said, "if they base it on the energy our city would bring to an event like this."

cut its $2.2 billion debt from the leveraged buyout in half. It emerged from bankruptcy protection in early 1998.

For 2001, the company reported more than $73 million in interest expense related to more than half a billion dollars in long-term debt.

Ebersole said company needs to reduce its debt so it can invest more in its restaurants.

The company reported an $88 million loss last year, compared with a $98 million loss the previous year. Revenues fell to $1.03 billion from $1.16 billion.

But the company cites positive numbers as well.

Minority traffic increased to 61 million visitors in 2000 from 51 million in 1998. And systemwide, which includes franchise revenues, sales last year reached a record $2.23 billion.

Mike Dabney recently stopped in for a bite at a Spartanburg Denny's, almost on a whim.

Like many other blacks, he had avoided the chain for years. But now he said he was willing to give Denny's another chance, and his decision on whether to return would have nothing to do with its past racial problems.

"It depends on how good the pie is," he said.

NAACP to hold annual gala

The state's first female Victims and Citizens Attorney Liaison to speak

SPECIAL TO THE CHRONICLE

The Winston-Salem NAACP will hold its 25th Annual Freedom Fund Gala Banquet on Friday, April 19, at the Benton Convention Center. Tickets for the event are $35 and can be purchased by calling (336) 748-1072. There will be scholarship awards given to area students in honor of the late Chuck Lewis and Sarah Marsh.

The keynote speaker for the event is Gwendolyn Burrell, victims and citizens attorney liaison in the Victims and Citizens Services Section of the N.C. Attorney General's Office.

Burrell provides legal advice to state offices and agencies and to the public as allowed by law. She concentrates on victims and citizens rights and issues that may affect elders such as fraud and abuse. Burrell is the former inspector general for North Carolina.

She was appointed to the position of inspector general by Attorney General Roy Cooper. Burrell was the first female to serve as inspector general for North Carolina. Prior to her appointment as inspector general, Ms. Burrell served as an assistant attorney general in the N.C. Department of Justice.

Burrell has also worked as an attorney in private practice, with the N.C. Department of Transportation, Human Relations Section, and as a criminal magistrate in Wake County.

She is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and a graduate of North Carolina Central University School of Law in Durham.

Burrell is an active member of Wake Chapel Church in Raleigh, where she serves as a member of the Deacons' Wives Ministry, Disciple Infake Ministry and Sunday school teacher; she is a member of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority Inc. and serves as an executive board member for New Beginnings Inc. a transitional housing program for women and children.

She resides in Raleigh with her husband, Gary E. Burrell, a lieutenant in the criminal investigations section of the Wake County Sheriff's Department. They have two sons, Jordan and Gordan.

The NAACP will also host the 15th Annual Sarah Marsh Benefit Scholarship Golf Classic at the Winston Lake Golf course on April 20 and April 21. Tee time is 8 a.m. on April 20.

Sharpton

Sharpton will speak about ways churches can take their messages outside of church walls and into the communities around them.

Sharpton's visit comes as Union celebrates its 80th anniversary. The church is on the corner of Trade and Northwest Boulevard.

Sharpton will speak during the 11 a.m. service Sunday. Later that day, the Rev. James Isaac, pastor of New Hope Granville Baptist Church in Oxford, will be featured during an afternoon worship service at 4 p.m.

"We will be visible and out in our communities to show our support for Erskine Bowles," stated Mike Spath. "We will heed the call and work hard to spread the word that Erskine is the best candidate for firefighters and the state's working families."

"I couldn't be more honored to have the support of the North Carolina Professional Fire Fighters," Bowles said. "Since September 11th, firefighters have become a symbol of the incredible sacrifice and dedication that is the hallmark of emergency responders."

"I am particularly proud to have the support of these heroes, who risk their lives on the job every day. They truly care about this state, and they deserve a senator who cares about them and their families and who will work to achieve real results. I want to be that kind of senator for these firefighters, their families and for all North Carolinians."

Bowles, a Democrat, has also recently received several endorsements, including former Gov. Jim Hunt and the state AFL-CIO.

but didn't admit guilt, said Randy Myers, a hotel spokesman.

The hotel alleges the teachers education association was required to pay for each of 758 rooms it had booked that the hotel was unable to fill, according to the federal lawsuit, which was filed Tuesday.

"We expect all groups that signed contracts to live up to the terms," Myers said.

Losing the event cost the hotel $93,234 in room charges alone, according to the lawsuit.

Another clause in the contract called for the group to pay $75,000 if less than 49 percent of the contracted guest rooms were occupied.

The company also lost the money that the 2,500 people who were scheduled to attend would have spent on food and liquor, the lawsuit said.

Myers said he couldn't discuss whether other lawsuits would follow against other groups that canceled events at Adam's Mark hotels.
