Former Turkish ambassador will give lecture at WSSU

SPECIAL TO THE CHRONICLE

Dr. Osman Faruk Logoglu, former Ambassador of the Republic of Turkey to the United States, will lecture on relations between the U.S. and Turkey at Winston-Salem State University on Wednesday, Nov. 19, from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. in room 136 of the R. J. Reynolds wilding.

The lecture, which is free and open to the public, is titled "Turkey: A Key U.S. Partner, Now and in the Future," and will focus on U.S.-Turkish relations and the Turkish perspective concerning the Caucasus, Iraq and Ambassador Logoglu retired from public service in 2006 after 35 years in the Turkish Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Currently, he is president of one of the leading think tanks in Turkey, the Eurasian Strategic Studies Center, headquartered in Ankara.

He joined the Turkish Foreign Service in 1971. He was appointed Deputy Undersecretary for multilateral political affairs in 1998 after his return from Baku. He then served as Undersecretary of the Foreign Ministry from 2000 until his posting as Ambassador of Turkey to Washington D.C. in 2001, where he stayed until the end of 2005.

Dr. Logoglu was born in Ankara, Turkey in 1941. He attended Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., where he received his Bachelor of Arts in Political Science 1963. He earned his Ph.D. in Political Science from Princeton University in 1969.

Dr. Logoglu is both a lecturer and author and also currently serves as Deputy Chairman of the Turkish National Commission for UNESCO, acting president of the Foundation for Local Volunteers for Disaster Relief and is a member of the Board of the Strategic Studies Center of the Turkish Ministry of Foreign Affairs

Web site from page A7

Coaches

Niumatalolo is Samoan.

Staffers for Michigan

David Czesniuk of the coach Rick Rodriguez told sur-

Center for the Study of Sports

in Society at Northeastern

Lapchick founded, said he was struck by who controlled the

"What stood out to me, is veyors he is not Hispanic.

from page A2

lism, the specialty that covers diabetes, as well as for kidney disease, which can be a diabetes-related complication.

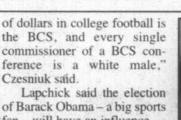

Scientists and physicianresearchers at Wake Forest Baptist are approaching diabetes from every angle, including basic science studies that seek to understand the molecular mechanisms of diabetes, research focused on the genetics of diabetes in minority populations, studies on diabetes and aging, childhood obesity and diabetes prevention, stem cell research and regenerative medicine. and population-based studies that seek better methods of treatment and prevention.

"Diabetes mellitus is the pandemic of the new millennium," said Donald W Bowden, Ph.D., director of the Diabetes Research Center and an internationally-known researcher specializing in diabetes in African-Americans. "It can be a devastating disease, affecting the heart, kidneys, eyes, nerves and brain. Our scientists and physicians are tackling diabetes from every angle looking for solu-fan - will have an influence. "His presidency will get people's attention, whether or not he gets involved," he said. "People will wonder: How can we have an African-American president and the lowest number of coaches in 15 years?"

Czesniuk said.

that in the biggest component HIPAA

from page A7

University,

rights have been violated.

How can I file a complaint?

program

If you feel your rights under the HIPAA law have been violated, you can file a Health Information Privacy complaint with your provider or with the federal government. As a US government entity, the Office of Civil Rights (OCR) has the authority to investigate complaints that have been filed and follow-up as necessary. Complaints must be filed in writing (via mail, fax, or e-mail) within 180 days (6 months) of when the violation occurred. The OCR prefers you use their own form (which can here: found http://www.hhs.gov/ocr/howtofileprivacy.pdf), although you can also write your own letter. Complaints should be submitted to your regional OCR office. For North Carolina, the appropriate office is in Atlanta (404-562-7886), and for Virginia, the appropriate office is in Philadelphia (215-861-4441). For more information, call OCR or visit their website: http://www.hhs.gov/ocr/hipaa/.

Remember, the HIPAA law protects your rights as a patient and as a participant in health research. It is important to understand your rights so you can work with your provider(s) or researchers to maximize the benefits of your

- Contribution by Jaimie Hunter, MPH

For more information about the Maya Angelou Center for Health Equity, visit our http://www.wfubmc.edu/minorityhealth. Or, for health information call toll-free 1-877-530-1824.

Film from page A2

walking a mile in Yvonne's shoes. As is noted in the film, about 3.5 million people are likely to experience homelessness in a given year. It's a problem that so permeates our society that virtually everyone knows someone whose home is the street.

Wilson's case, it was family member she knew while she was growing up in Houston.

"Some people are homeless by choice because of stubbornness and pride and not being able to work with anybody else," she says. "They make a choice to be out on the street. They just refuse to function in society. It's kind of a way of rebellion and there's even an element of pride about that. And I have an uncle who made that choice many years ago."

As for Yvonne, she had become so complacent in her dire situation that it took someone as persistent and persuasive as Baumann to prod her into making a change. What heartbreaking about Yvonne's struggles, Wilson says, is the way she would "dig her heels in" and convince herself that she was satisfied, "even though she wasn't really seeing the reality of her life."

If "Accidental Friendship" motivates even one viewer to reach out to help someone in need, Wilson says, all of the uncomfortable hours that she spent on the set, covered with dirt and grime, can be considered time well spent. But Wilson is also convinced that every viewer can be inspired by Yvonne's comeback. After all, she says, aren't we all guilty of self-destructive complacency from time to time? "A lot of us are kind of paralyzed and not getting on with life - and I'm not just talking about those of us who have lost everything," Wilson says. "If you truly want your life to get better, you have to get out of the complaining stage and stop that 'if only' way of thinking. It's about what you choose to do with your life. You have the power to make choices that make your life better."

The film also stars Tony winner Ben Vereen, as Wes Smith, a streetbound friend of Yvonne's. Vereen is also proud to apart of the though-provoking film.

"Having the chance to have that little, vague glimpse into that world is an honor," he said.

HISTORIC ENCOUNTER

A group of North Carolina A&T State University students came face-to-face with history on Sunday as they met Valerie Jarrett (second from left), the co-chairperson of President-elect Barack Obama's Transition Team, in Washington, D.C. The journalism students, along with USA Today columnist DeWayne Wickham, an A&T professor and director of the school's Institute for Advanced Journalism Studies, were in the nation's capital for the opening session of the annual meeting of the Trotter Group, an organization of black columnists and commentators that was formed in 1992.

WINSTON-SALEM SYMPHONY ROBERT MOODY, MUSIC DIRECTOR

Leonard Bernstein - American composer, conductor, and educator of unmatched talent, energy, and passion - was one of the most important musicians of the twentieth century. To celebrate the 90th anniversary of his birth, Jamie Bernstein joins the Winston-Salem Symphony in a moving program featuring her father's sacred choral works. Please join us for this very special performance.

Symphony no. 3, Kaddish, Chichester Psalms, "Simple Song" from Mass

Guest Artists:

Jamie Bernstein, narrator Amy Johnson, soprano Winston-Salem Symphony Chorale UNCSA Cantata Singers Winston-Salem Children's Chorus

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 2008, AT 3:00 P.M. TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 2008, AT 7:30 P.M. Stevens Center of the University of North Carolina School of the Arts

TICKETS: $15-$55

For more information, call 336-464-0145 or visit www.wssymphony.org.

So far the North Carolina Education Lottery has raised more than 825 million for education.

IN THE GREENSBORO AREA

$48,093,595

$27,756,499

More at Four Program For $28,456,390

$6,380,004

Total as of September 30, 2008. Totals as of June 30, 2008. For distribution of funds by county, visit nc-educationlottery.org

