A&T choir performs at the White House

SPECIAL TO THE CHRONICLE

North Carolina A&T State University Choir recently performed at the White House. The choir was invited by President Barack Obama, First Lady Michelle Obama and the Visitors Office in celebration of Black History Month.

"This was a monumental milestone for me and my students. Even most world renowned performers can't boast of having performed in the White House and spending an entire day on the premises. This experience was bigger than the usual Carnegie Hall debut. It was the ultimate," said A&T University Choir Director Travis Alexander.

The choir's repertoire included Negro Spirituals and patriotic music.

"Due to security reasons, the secret service would only allow me to bring 28 students of the 42 enrolled in the choir," Alexander said.

Alexander explained that all members of the choir were given an opportunity to participate in a rigorous and competitive audition. They were required to memorize music, sight-read new music with correct rhythms and pitch and sing their various part randomly in quartet formation.

Choir members selected to participate in the performance included: Sopranos - Angelica McRae, Christa Shepherd, Stacie Lyles, Quannessa Smith, Chelsey Stanley, Chelsea Davis, Najaya Ruffin and Nadia Harper. Altos - Asheley Lindsay, Akiera Hill, Deja Edmund, Andrea Whitehead, Asheena Moore, Jasmine Boone, Lukeia Elmore and

Sierra Perry. Tenors - Ricky Lattimore, James Thomas, Brandon Monroe, Martavious Patton, Aaron Graham and T. J. Harris. Basses - Brandon Bellerand, Marquise Broadnax, Drorester Alexander, Dominique Wharton, Jerry Jackson and Howard Brown.
