CWU marking World Communion Day

Church Women United (CWU) will celebrate World Communion Day as part of its 70th anniversary at 10 a.m. on Saturday, November 5 at Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church, 200 Regan St. in Greensboro.

The theme is "Living our Faith, Unlocking Action," and everyone is encouraged to bring non-perishable food items for the Greensboro Urban Ministries. CWU says unlocking action first requires admitting our shortcomings while at the same time inspiring others to join in, creating a better world for tomorrow.

CWU events this year are looking back to its past and forward to its future. Church Women United was founded in 1941 as an ecumenical movement involving Protestant, Roman Catholic, Orthodox and other Christian women in the US and Puerto Rico.

Organized into local units, CWU works for peace and social justice from a Christian basis while supporting dialogue with all faith groups. It is a recognized United Nations Non-Governmental Organization (NGO), and it is celebrating 70 years of the Church Women United Movement. Vivian Barber is president of the Greensboro unit.

Passes for N.C. toll roads selling briskly

The North Carolina Turnpike Authority sold its 1,000th NC Quick Pass transponder Wednesday, eight days after opening the NC Quick Pass Customer Service Center in Morrisville and launching sales on the NC Quick Pass web site.

NC Quick Pass is a pre-paid account used for all-electronic toll collection. It is one way of paying for tolls on future North Carolina toll facilities. The first phase of the Triangle Expressway, the state's first toll road, will open to traffic in December of this year. Drivers can open an NC Quick Pass pre-paid account and use a small electronic device called a transponder. The transponder attaches to the vehicle and is read by antennas mounted

Tolls will be collected electronically, eliminating the need for toll booths.

Miss Eaves

artist to perform at SECCA

Miss Eaves (aka Shanthony Exum) will perform for the fall opening at The Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA), 750 Marguerite Drive, on Nov. 3 from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. "Miss Eaves" is Exum's one-woman project, named after her favorite typeface. This project has taken the Triad indie-electronica scene by storm.

She will perform original music and DJ sets. As the music plays, she will incorporate video that accompanies and highlights the music as she colorfully blends the worlds of art and fashion from Lady Gaga to "The Lord of the Rings." Miss Eaves' debut EP, "Byte This" is currently available for download on Bandcamp.

This opening celebrates the exhibits "Out of Fashion," showcasing the work of 11 NC-based artists, and "Lilly McElroy," who stars in her own performative series "I Throw Myself at Men."

For additional information on the opening at SECCA, visit www.secca.org or call 336-725-1904.

Reunion

bers. Davis, Howard and Hentz say they can all testify to the great impact the Winston Lake Family Y — the county's decades old historically black facility — has had on their lives.

Davis, a father of three, remembers coming to the Y everyday as a youngster. He lived in the City View community, which is a stone's throw away from the Waterworks Road facility.

"My whole neighborhood was at the Y when I was coming up," said Davis. "We used to get in packs of 10 or 20 and walk down here."

Hentz, 67, landed his first job at the Y, making 60 cents an hour as a youth counselor. He was hired by Moses "Mo" Lucas, a long-time Y personality who has served as a mentor to countless young people over his 50-plus years with the Winston Lake Y.

"Mo gave me my first job here, and I ain't left the Y since," declared Hentz, a retired bartender and one of seven children. "I've been here all my life; when I was coming up, it was all I had."

Hentz and Davis, both the products of single parent homes, said Lucas filled a void in their lives. Lucas' legendary tough love has been credited by many for keeping them in-line and on the right side of the law.

"That's the only guy I've ever seen that can whup your rump and still keep a cigar in his mouth," Hentz said with a chuckle. "...He'd bust a ping pong paddle every day on us."

Organizers will be paying homage to Lucas, the founder of the Boss Drummers, during the Reunion. The tribute will be special. Lucas, who is in his 80s, recently had a kidney removed, but was back at the Y as soon as doctors gave him the OK.

Roberts

"We want to get everybody back home," Davis said. "But most importantly, we want to honor Mo."

Membership Director Jolyn Roberts said Winston Lake Y leaders are thrilled to have their members display such a strong show of support.

"It feels good that the passion is still there for Winston Lake, that people still have that passion and they want to see us grow and the members are taking the initiative to do these things," said Roberts, who has been with the Y organization for the last 11 years. "We're looking forward to this opportunity just to have people from the Y come back in and see the programs we have now. It's an opportunity for them to get reconnected to the place they grew up in."

Organizers are still looking for more players to take part in the Reunion basketball game, a single elimination tournament. For more information about the event, call 724-9205 or check Winston Lake Family YMCA's Facebook page.
