

Carolina Winston-Sale

Residents ponder possible library sites

-See Page A2

HRONIC

Volume 40, Number 1 -

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

THURSDAY, August 29, 2013

WSSU students Breanna Holmes, Shae'Derrickah Henderson and Kashira Coleman.

BY LAYLA GARMS THE CHRONICLE

Just weeks after arriving back on campus, Winston-Salem University students are mobilizing for a cause that hits close to home.

New Forsyth County Board of Elections Chairman Ken Raymond has been vocal about wanting to do away with the early voting site at WSSU's

Bell

Anderson Center, where thousands, including many students. cast ballots in The 2012. Anderson Center has been used as an early voting site in presidential and midterm election cycles, so any decision would not take effect until 2014. Raymond, a WSSU alumnus who played on the school's football team, served as a precinct judge at the Anderson Center in 2010. He says he did not like what he saw. Some of the students that came in and voted talked openly about receiving extra credit for voting," Raymond told The Chronicle after being appointed to the board in July. "This isn't something that someone told me ... I heard it myself. They talked as if they didn't know they were doing something wrong. But it is wrong - in fact it's a felony. WSSU packed last Tuesday's Board of Elections meeting. Although Raymond had made it clear that the topic of 2014 early voting sites would not be discussed, Student Body President Bryant Bell said the students wanted to show that they will fight to keep the Anderson Center site, especially after Republican-led Watauga County Board of Elections voted recently to end the early voting site at Appalachian State University.

I was upset by it because obviously for the past couple of months or so in the state of North Carolina, college students have been somewhat under attack," said Bell, a senior economics

ther miffed after N-word incident

BY LAYLA GARMS THE CHRONICLE

Celebrity Chef Paula Deen lost her television show and millions of dollars in endorsements; Philadelphia

Eagle Riley Cooper faced team disciplinary actions and the ire of his teammatess; and the campaign of James Lee Knox, a Republican Winston-Salem mayoral candidate, sank after he lost the backing of his party; but a local black man says that a white person who directed the nword at him and his children at a local YMCA has not even received a slap on the wrist.

As a child of the segregated South, Kenneth Boston said being called racial epithets is not new to him, but the city native and father of seven is heated that his children were subjected to such

See N-word on A8

Tanje Smith-Perry congratulates her shocked mother, birthday girl Cora Smith.

Photos by Layla Garmi

Surprise!!

League hosts birthday party for 90-year-old bowler

BY LAYLA GARMS THE CHRONICLE

Cora Smith got an unexpected reception when she walked into Northside Lanes on Aug. 19 for the Golden Age Seniors Bowling League meeting.

Smith, a longtime member of the league, froze when she entered the room to find homemade cupcakes and a roomful of smiling members singing "Happy Birthday."

The South Carolina native quickly recovered from her initial shock and began playfully swatting at her giggling friends, scolding them roundly for their trick-

"I'm beating up on everybody," declared Smith, who celebrated her 90th birthday on Aug. 25.

'Oh my goodness y'all are going to make me cry!' she exclaimed as League Coordinator Theresa Cranford led her to her seat of honor at the front of the room. "You all knew and didn't say anything."

Golden Age Senior Bowlers (from left): Hannah Barco, Margie See Smith on A2 Bohannon and Sarah Brooks.

See Voting on A9

Barnhill now thriving with his other God-given talent

Norton Barnhill's paintings adorn walls of Swee Potatoes.

BY TODD LUCK THE CHRONICLE

When Winston-Salem native Norton Barnhill was a youngster, he had two dreams.

I knew I was going to play in the NBA when I was 10-years-old; I dreamed about it," he said. "I also dreamed I was going to be an abstract artist, but I didn't tell anyone about the art.'

Specifically, he dreamed of playing for the Seattle Supersonics after reading about the team in a newspaper

See Barnhill on A7 The artist at home.

8 DW 5TH ST NSTON SALEM, NC 27101-2755 PUBLIC LIBRARY N C ROOM N C ROOM FORSYTH CTY F 660 W 5TH ST

արդերիկիրժող III հիշվորհումի հերևոր III հուրդիրդ

Personal, convenient, secure. professional self-storage

MOVE IN SPECIAL for first mont

(336) 924-7000 www.assuredstoragews.com

