Wilkins coming home to battle Rams

SPECIAL TO THE CHRONICLE

Native Jairus Wilkins, an offensive lineman and team captain on the Elizabeth City State University football team, is excited about returning home this weekend to take on the Winston-Salem State University Rams.

A 2009 graduate of Parkland High School, Wilkins is a communications major who plans to graduate in December.

He stands at nearly 6'3" and weighs 280 pounds. He was an offensive lineman at Parkland for four years; from there, he went to a junior college program - Carolina Sports Academy - while taking classes at Guilford Technical College. During a combine at the Academy, he was discovered and recruited by Elizabeth City Offensive Coordinator Coach Alvin Parker.

Wilkins

Jairus is the son of Bishop Melvin and Sharessa Wilkins Pastors of New Generation Praise & Worship International Ministries and the proud big brother of Isaiah Wilkins.

The Rams will square off against the Vikings on Saturday, Sept. 27 at 6 p.m. at Bowman Gray Stadium.

Women's Day at St. James

SPECIAL TO THE CHRONICLE

St. James AME Church, 1501 N. Patterson Ave., will have Women's Day on Sunday, Sept. 28. The theme is "Women of Destiny: Walking in Faith, Living in Victory."

At the 10 a.m. service, Rev. Florissa Walker, associate minister at Hunter's Chapel AME Church in Mebane, will bring the message. She attended the Orange County schools and pursued a career in Nursing. She spent more than two years in the Duke Lay Study Program. In 1997, Walker formed "The Pathway Ministry," which ministers to the terminally ill. She is also an avid seamstress.

Rev. Daisy Long, pastor of St. Matthew AME Church in Graham will speak at 3 p.m. In 1975, she graduated from the Burlington Technical

Walker

Long

Institute Practical Nursing Program and worked at North Carolina Memorial Hospital for five years. In 1996, the Long graduated cum laude with a BA degree in sociology from Shaw University; she also received a master's degree in religious education from Shaw. She has pastored several AME Churches and is retired from Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

At the end of the afternoon service, Miss or Mister St. James will be crowned. The contestants are Ashanti N. Lovette, daughter of Dan and Mona Lovette; Kinya S. McLaurin, the daughter of Karen McLaurin; and Jamani Lomax, the son of Jason and Shannon Lomax. The day-long celebration will end with a fellowship dinner.

The public is cordially invited to all of the services. Rev. Steven L. Lyons is the host pastor. For more information, call 336-724-3865.

Prayer

were't quiet that many last week, but it was enough to surround the jail with a gap here and there.

Participants prayed on their own using various prayer style. Some prayed silently, while others were quite voluble with their spiritual supplications. Many joined hands; some raised their arms in praise. Others waved to the inmates, who could be seen watching the action below from the Detention Center's tiny windows.

The praying lasted about 20 minutes and ended with participants singing "Amazing Grace."

So Be It Ministries was among the many congregations represented at the event. The small church on Reynolda Road only has about 30-40 members. Pastor Mickel Hosey and his wife, Deloris, originally founded the church in Wisconsin. They relocated it here nearly four years ago when they moved.

Associate Pastor Abraham Grant is a long-time member of FJPM's Yoke Fellows program, which allows clergy and laypeople to fellowship with inmates at the Forsyth Correctional Center on Cherry Street. He said he knew Friday's prayer circle meant something to those inside the jail.

"It gives them a lot of hope and a lot of desires to do the right thing," he said.

Tim and Cynthia Key's longtime involvement with Yoke Fellows also brought them out. They became involved with inmates when a young man in their daughter's church youth group was placed in the Detention Center. They started visiting him and wanted to become involved with others. They discovered their was a prison in Winston-Salem (the Cherry Street facility) and inquired about volunteering there. Eighteen years later, they now regularly take inmates out to eat and to church services.

"They're human beings like anyone else," Tim Key said. "Jesus went to the outcasts, the marginalized and the rejected ... we realize they deserve another chance."

Through Yoke Fellows, the couple has formed many bonds, including with Steven Dillard, who joined them in Friday's prayer circle.

The Forsyth Correctional Center was his last stop during a three year incarceration that took him to five prisons across the state. Sober and drug free, Dillard has been out of prison for nearly two years and is gainfully employed with a Class A trucking permit.

He was in prison for trafficking cocaine; he now delivers drugs of the legal kind, along with cosmetics, to a warehouse two days a week. He works at Tim Key's lawn care and handy man service the rest of the week.

Dillard, who lives in Guilford County, said coming to a jail, albeit outside, brought back a lot of memories and reminded him why he needs to stay focused.

"I feel like it's only right that I come out and pray for the people who are going through the same struggle I went through," he said. "...If they have their minds and their hearts in the right place, it means the world to them to see (us praying). If they're thinking like I was thinking, they're thinking. That's going to be me standing out there one day."
